Second Attempted Robbery of Her Home in Three Days.

TWO MEN SUSPECTED

Chief of Police Dukeman Picks up Charley Nighthart and Billy Green, Who Admit Being Nearby Scene of Robbery but Deny Theft.

A second attempted robbery at the home of Harry Ruhl, on Bishop Street, within three days' time, resulted in the arrest on Tuesday night of Charley Nighthart and Billy Green, the latter colored. The young men were picked up by Chief of Police Dukeman on suspicion. Both denied being implicated in the job. They admitted, however, that they had been at a stable a short distance from the Ruhl home about the time it was entered on Tuesday evening.

On Sunday night, last, the Ruhl home was entered and the thieves got away with $10 in cash, some silver spoons and a quantity of valuable lace. The robbery was not discovered until the following morning. The money was removed from the drawer of a sideboard.

On Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Ruhl entertained several friends. Shortly after the latter had departed, Mrs. Ruhl had occasion to go into the dining room. As she stepped into the room she was conscious of the presence of two men. Owing to the fact that the room was in darkness she was unable to recognize either. On discovering the men in the room, Mrs. Ruhl screamed. The two intruders instantly made a break through the dining room door and disappeared through a yard toward the stable which Nighthart and Green later admitted they had visited.

Chief Dukeman and Squire Henry D. Brown were at the Undine Fire Company hosehouse when Mrs. Ruhl discovered the thieves in her home. Chief Dukeman instituted an investigation and noticed Nighthart and Green in the vicinity. He later picked up Green in front of the Bellefonte Trust Company. Nighthart was found near the Garman House. When accused by Chief Dukeman with having entered the Ruhl home the young men denied it. They said that they had visited the stable neaaby, but that they were merely hunting for some beer.

AUTO HITS WAGON

John Uhl and Frank Weaver in Accident Near Pleasant Gap.

While Frank Weaver and John Uhl were driving in a spring wagon, down the mountain near Pleasant Gap, on Saturday evening, last, an automobile collided with them from the rear. The spring wagon was stood upon end by the force of the collision and Mr. Uhl was thrown between the wagon and the horse. Mr. Weaver happened to be holding onto the wagon brake at the time and was thrown to one side, landing in the road. Mr. Uhl was pretty badly bruised but Mr. Weaver escaped unhurt.

The automobile was occupied by a man and a woman, whose names were not made known. It was found impossible to release Mr. Uhl from his uncomfortable position until the automobile was pushed away from the wagon. This allowed the wagon to be pulled back and Mr. Uhl to regain his feet.

Charged With Stealing Bicycle.

Chief of Police Dukeman, on Tuesday evening, last, arrested William Hampton, aged about 20 years, a son of Stuart Hampton, on the charge of having stolen a bicycle, valued at $30, from Joseph B. Beam, of Tyrone. Hampton at first denied his guilt but later, according to Chief Dukeman, admitted that he had sold the wheel to a young man named Rote, living up Spring Creek, for $6. Hampton was lodged in jail.

Golden Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. George Miles Stanley, of Ginter, Clearfield county, on Monday of last week celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Ten children born to their union were in attendance at the celebration. Mrs. Stanley was formerly Miss Amelia Cain. She and Mr. Stanley were married at Spring Mills.

Arm Severed From Body.

John Spitler, of Bald Eagle, met with a painful accident while at work at W. D. Woodman's sawmill, at Mill Creek. His arms were pinned to the carriage by a shifted piece of lumber and forced against the huge saw. One arm was severed from the body and the other terribly injured. Spitler is in the Altoona hospital, where his condition is regarded as critical.

GEORGE SMITH KILLED DEATH CAUSED BY AUTO

Civil War Veteran Run Down on Street on Saturday Afternoon.

HIS SKULL FRACTURED

Attempting to Cross Street Near Penna. Passenger Station, was Struck by Machine—Died at His Home Several Hours Later.

Becoming confused in front of an approaching automobile, George Smith, a resident of Bellefonte and well known old soldier, was run down on Saturday afternoon, last, sustaining injuries which resulted in his death several hours later. The accident happened in front of the Lauderbach-Barber Company store, shortly after 5 o'clock. Mr. Smith was knocked down, his head striking heavily on the brick pavement, resulting in a fractured skull. The machine passed over his right leg, breaking it near the ankle, the wound being so sharp that the broken bones protruded through the flesh. The automobile was driven by Ward W. Hegarty, of Coalport, who at once surrendered himself to Chief of Police Dukeman. Mr. Hegarty was overcome with grief. On Monday morning he appeared for a hearing before Squire W. H. Musser. The hearing was continued until 10 o'clock tothorrow (Friday) morning.

The accident happened in full view of many persons assembled near the Pennsylvania Railroad passenger station. The street was filled with automobiles and buggies, returning from the baseball game. Mr. Hegarty, with members of his family, was driving his machine into town. It is supposed that his attention was momentarily diverted by the puffing of the engine attached to the Snow Shoe train. He was looking at the engine when a warning cry from Chief Dukeman caused him to turn his car from the path of Mr. Smith. The latter had started to cross the street in front of the car. Mr. Hegarty gave the steering wheel a quick turn to the left. Fearing that he could not across ahead of the car, Mr. Smith attempted to retrace his steps. As he did so the automobile bore down upon him, hurling him to the street, the injured man's head striking the brick paving with a crash.

Mr. Hegarty stopped his car as quickly as possible and jumped to the side of the injured man. Mr. Smith was unconscious but shortly afterward regained his senses. The hospital ambulance was summoned but he asked that he be removed to his home, which was done. There, about 9 o'clock that night, he died.

Mr. Smith was a well known figure in Bellefonte, having made his home here for about 18 years. He was aged about 67 years and is survived by a widow, who was formerly Miss Beck, of Nittany; one daughter, Miss Erma, of Bellefonte, and one brother, Andrew, of Lock Haven. During the Civil war Mr. Smith served as a member of Company E, Seventh Pennsylvania Cavalry, enlisting August, 1861, and reinlisting at the expiration of his team. Prior to going to war he resided in Nittany Valley. Funeral services were held on Tuesday, conducted by Rev. Fred W. Barry, pastor of the Lutheran church, of which the deceased was a member. Interment was made at the Union cemetery, the services there being in charge of the Loyal Legion, with which order Mr. Smith had been actively identified.

The fatal accident to Mr. Smith marks the third tragic death of an old soldier in recent years. Five or six years ago, it will be recalled, Captain George A. Bayard was killed by a Pennsylvania Railroad passenger train at this place. A few weeks ago William Gehret, another well known old soldier, jumped from an automobile to avoid an accident and was killed by a passing freight train at Hecla Park.

All three men served through the war, escaping death in battle and surviving the ravages of disease. Each lived to a ripe old age, only to be killed in accidents.

Grangers at Centre Hall.

WILLIAMS AND SCHENCK CLANS HOLD THEIR ANNUAL REUNIONS

Always an interesting and delightful function, the annual reunion of the Williams family, on Saturday at John Q. Miles' grove, near Martha, was one of the most successful held in recent years. While the attendance was perhaps not quite so large as last year, those present were confined chiefly to the clan and represented many families who are justly proud to bear the name of Williams.

It must not be supposed that there was not a large crowd in attendance. It was a big crowd, filling the beautiful grove and making things lively from morning until evening. The weather was ideal for such an occasion. It was just cool enough to make moving about comfortable and not fatigue the numerous older members of the Williams connection.

Incidentally, it might be remarked that it, of course, didn't rain. Those who have not kept track of these interesting family gatherings may not know it, but it is nevertheless true that it has never rained on reunion day. There have been times when the day's festivities have been threatened by rain, but good luck and the Williams clan seem to travel together and as a consequence sunshine always turns up at the right time. This was again the case with last Saturday's reunion. Lowering clouds caused no little anxiety on Friday night but Saturday loomed up bright and clear and the chilly wave of the previous day gave way to warmer weather.

Early in the day the crowd began to assemble, some driving to the grove and others arriving by train. Pretty nearly every family had their dinner carefully packed in baskets or boxes. Through the courtesy of the Pennsylvania Railroad trains were stopped at the grove, which was a great accommodation to the hundreds of persons, especially the women and children, who otherwise would have [illegible] picnic grounds. There were the usual number of booths, having on display toys and other articles that go with such an occasion. A merry-go-round added to the merriment and for the baseball fans there was a lively game in the afternoon between the Martha and Port Matilda teams. Martha won, 6—0. Both teams played well.

There is always a little in the way of speechmaking at a Williams reunion and Saturday was no exception to this. A. S. Williams, who, it will be recalled by his numerous friends, some time ago broke his right ankle, was home from the Cottage Hospital, at Philipsburg, and presided over the meeting. While he appeared with crutches his face showed good color and his leg had mended so nicely that he was able to move about as actively as many persons much younger. To him the day was in reality a reunion with his friends, for during his illness he remained seven weeks at Philipsburg. Those who spoke included Rev. Mr. Ake, Rev. Victor Wagner, Rev. Elmer L. Williams and Clement Dale. E. J. Williams, secretary of the association, presented the mortality report for the last year. Miss Mamie Hoover, of Julian, delivered a recitation which was especially well rendered and greatly appreciated by all.

Rev. Elmer L. Williams is a former Centre County boy, now residing in Chicago. With Mrs. Williams and their two very interesting children they are visiting Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Williams, at Unionville. In his talk Mr. Williams urged every member of the family of that name to work to purify moral and municipal conditions. He briefly referred to numerous interesting incidents in his work as a minister in Chicago. To young men and young women who may be thinking of going to the city to work he urged that they prepare themselves in advance that they may withstand the temptations that lurk in the larger and strange lands. His talk was closely followed by all who heard him, pretty nearly everybody present knowing him personally as a former Unionville boy.

Secretary E. J. Williams presented the following mortality report:

"Death loves a shining mark. This has been exemplified by the members of our families who have been called to their reward since their last reunion with us. Those who have answered the final roll call are Mrs. Susan Eberts Gates, died December 8, 1909; Frederick Williams, died December 30, 1909; Albert V. Williams, died January 6, 1910; Jesse S. Williams, died April 20, 1910; Reeder King Eberts, died July 8, 1910; Charles A. Williams, died July 29, 1910; Mrs.

The sixth bienniel reunion of the Schenck family was held in the beautiful grove on the original Schenck farm, a short distance from Howard, last Thursday. Delightful weather gave assurance of a large crowd and the reunion was one of the most successful yet held. Automobiles and livery hacks conveyed the people to and from the picnic grounds and by noon a large crowd was on hand. The exercises of the day were presided over by the President David B. Schenck. Music was furnished by a select choir and the Howard band. At the forenoon services divine blessing was invoked by Rev. Rollin S. Taylor and the address of welcome was made by Nathan H. Schenck. Rev. W. H. Patterson responded to this welcome. At the dinner hour the many families in attendance assembled about the festive board in all parts of the grove and baskets well filled with choice viands were spread before them.

After dinner a short business session was held and officers elected for the ensuing four years. The following were elected: President, D. B. Schenck; first vice president, H. S. Pletcher; second vice president, Wm. B. Pletcher; treasurer, John F. Schenck; secretary, H. C. Holter; corresponding secertary, Hayes Schenck. Addresses were then made by Prof. B. F. Pletcher, of Lock Haven; Rev. E. F. Faust and Rev. W. W. Rhoades, of Howard, and David S. Pletcher, of Rochester, Ind. B. F. Pletcher gave an interesting history of the Pletcher family and many interesting reminiscences of the kindred families, depicting their sterling qualities and sturdy manhood. Others spoke of the importance of family ties and the effect of home life on [illegible] develop[illegible] the [illegible] of the western Pletchers, at Gosher, Ind., on the second Tuesday in August, 1911. The president read a memorial on the death of the members since the reunion in 1908. Those who passed to the great beyond since the last reunion were: Ammon Schenck, Theophilus Pletcher, Leah Naomi Schenck, and G. Harvey Mann, husband of Mabel Pletcher Mann.

Before the close of the exercises a motion was made to have a committee on history appointed and the this was agreed to. The president appointed N. H. Schenck, B. F. Pletcher, D. W. Pletcher, H. C. Holter, Sarah Bechdel, and Joseph Schenck.

Among those present from a distance we note the following: S. P. Schenck, Mrs. Geo. E. Miller, Edward Schenck, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Schenck, N. J. Pletcher, Clearfield: Mrs. Alice Smith and daughter, Shirleysburg; Max Worthinton, Muncy; Mrs. George Casselbey, Elmer and Miss Jennie Holter, Williamsport; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lathurst, Johnstown; Mr. and Mrs. Ind S. Pletcher, Rochester, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. DeLong and Mr. and Mrs. Ellery Tice, Juniata; Miss Mollie [illegible]th, B. F. Pletcher, Mrs. P. A. Lon[illegible] and son, Lock Haven; Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Pletcher, Bellwood; Elsie Pletcher, Plattsville, Ill., Mr. and Mrs. G. Williams, Altoona; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Roberts, Pitcairn.

Professor Musser Weds.

On Wesday at noon, Professor E. C. Musser of Pine Grove Mills, and Miss Mary Werline, of East Liberty, Pa., were united by Rev. Fred W. Barry, the ceremony being performed at the Werline home in the presence of a few intimate friends. The young couple later visited Musser home, on the Branch, where a real reception was tendered. They make their home at Greenville, where Professor Musser is instructor in mathematics in the Greenville High School.

OSCEOLA WINS PENNANT IN MOUNTAIN LEAGUE

Bellefonte's Hopes Vanish With One-Sided Defeat Yesterday.

NOW FOR SECOND PLACE

Battling With Clearfield for Second Honors and Has Chance to Win—Season Ends Saturday—Double-header at Philipsburg.

STANDING OF CLUBS.

	Won	Lost	Pct
Osceola	26	15	634
Bellefonte	21	18	540
Clearfield	19	19	400
Philipsburg	11	25	300

Had Bellefonte won yesterday's game and the three remaining games which she is to play, and had Osceola lost all of her remaining games, the two towns would have been tied for first place. By winning yesterday, however, Osceola clinches its hold at the head of the league and cannot be deprived of the pennant.

Bellefonte and Clearfield now are fighting it out for second place, with the chances favoring Bellefonte. Clearfield had its chances to gain ground yesterday but could not size up and lost to Philipsburg, 4-3. While Philipsburg is now playing good ball, that team took a brace too late in the season to get out of last place in the league.

Bellefonte played two games here this week with Osceola, losing the first, on Monday, and winning the second, on Tuesday, the latter game being one of the most exciting seen on the home grounds this season. Bellefonte won in the ninth, the score being 6—5. When Osceola went to bat in the ninth the score was a tie, 4—4. Osceola scored [illegible] for Bellefonte and Bellefonte scratched [illegible] plate and a few minutes later scored a second time.

Osceola's victory on Monday virtually settled the fight for the pennant. Had Bellefonte won that game she would have stood a fighting chance, but even with Tuesday's victory in her favor the best that could be done was an even break with Osceola. Taking no chances, Osceola jumped into yesterday's game at the beginning and got a lead in the early innings. Bellefonte was unable to make any headway and the middle of the game found Osceola comfortably in the lead and the penant won.

Bellefonte today again plays Osceola, at the latter place. Tomorrow Bellefonte plays a double header at Philipsburg. This winds up the league season for Bellefonte. Osceola's final game is that with Bellefonte tomorrow. Clearfield and Philipsburg close the season, at Philipsburg, on Saturday.

NOTICE TO VOTERS

Reminder of Dates for Assessment and Payment of Taxes.

It is of the utmost importance to voters in Centre County that they keep in mind the fact that Wednesday, September 7, is the last day for the assessment of taxes, and that Saturday, October 8, is the last day for the payment of taxes to enable a voter to vote at the coming November election.

Nothing is more annoying to a voter than to discover when it is too late that he has neglected to qualify. By making note of the foregoing dates, and then attending to his taxes, no voter can go wrong.

PLOWS AT 76; WAS ONCE REJECTED BY ARMY DRS.

James McDonald, of Martha, Had Interesting War Experience.

SAW 4 YEARS SERVICE

Sworn in Without Medical Certificate—Examining Physicians Said He Couldn't Live Three Months—Is "Republican" Subscriber.

Rejected by the medical examiners at Camp Curtin and advised that he couldn't live more than three months; sworn into the army without a medical certificate; was in active service for almost four years; now aged 76 years and last week was out plowing on his farm near Martha.

The foregoing sums up the bare outline of an interesting and most unusual experience of a regular reader of "The Republican"—James McDonald, of Martha, who was a genial visitor at our office a few days ago.

In the first place, one to look at Mr. McDonald would not suspect that he is within four years of the four score mark, so active and vigorous and alert is he, both mentally and physically. The story he related to us is well worth repeating. Nothing would give Mr. McDonald more satisfaction than to learn some time that his narrative had come to the notice of the army physician who turned him down at Camp Curtin.

"It was this way", explained Mr. McDonald by way of beginning his story. "With the call for troops I went to Camp Curtin with Benner Wilson, who was waiting for his commission as Captain but couldn't get it until he had a company recruited. I expected to enlist in his company but the medical board turned me down. They rejected me. One of the doctors curiously pass me [illegible] He said to me, 'McDonald, you wouldn't [illegible] was disappointed [illegible] mind there wasn't anything to do but go back home. I was standing around, saying goodbye to the rest of the fellows who were about to be sworn into the service. The Provost Marshal happened to step out just where we were standing and ordered those to be sworn in to raise their right hands. I didn't raise my hand or pay any attention to him, when he suddenly called out, pointing his finger at me: 'Say, you, down there at the end of the line, are you going to war?'

"'Sure I am,' I answered, for it struck me right away that he thought I had been passed by the medical board. 'Well, get your right hand up, then', he ordered, and you bet up went my hand. With the others there I was sworn in and immediately went to the commissary department and drew a uniform. The next day we were off for the war, I with the rest and no medical certificate, either. The doctors may have though I couldn't live three months, but I fooled them. Once I had yellow jaundice and an otheritime inflammatory rheumatism, but with these exceptions I never had anything wrong with me and saw almost four years of hard service. During that time I saw lots of good men die from sickness, big, strong fellows who looked to be good for pretty nearly any kind of a test.

"I saw and helped bring about Lee's surrender. I was a member of Company F. Second Cavalry and was an orderly for General Meade at Gettysburg. That was almost four years from the day the doctors at Camp Curtin turned me down with what was just about a suggestion that it would be a good thing to pick out my favorite undertaker."

With a broad smile on his face Mr. McDonald concluded:

"I wish the doctors who turned me down had happened along by my farm yesterday. They would have seen me out in the field plowing, and if I do say it myself, I can do a pretty good day's plowing, even if I am 76 years old."

DIMELING HAS COLD FEET QUITS RACE FOR SENATOR

Democratic Nominee Finally Driven Out of Contest.

DR. WHITE MENTIONED

Philipsburg Man, and Former County Treasurer, May be Named for Vacancy Created by Bitter Factional Fight in Clearfield.

Senator George M. Dimeling on Saturday, last, announced his withdrawal as a candidate for re-election on the Democratic ticket. His action is regarded as virtually insuring the election of Joseph Alexander, the Republican nominee.

It is said that Dr. F. K. White, of Philipsburg, can have the nomination to succeed Dimeling, but that he hesitates to accept, realizing that it will be an uphill job to defeat Alexander. Fred Betts, of Clearfield, is also mentioned as Dimeling's successor.

The district is made up of Centre and Clearfield counties. Both Senator Dimeling and Mr. Alexander reside in Clearfield county.

Bitter factional fighting among the Democrats in Clearfield county, forced Dimeling to quit the race. It was an open secret that many Democrats in his home county were not only unwilling to vote for him but were planning to take the field against him during the campaign. In announcing his withdrawal, Senator Dimeling issued the following statement:

"I have decided not to be a candidate for the senate, for the reason that my party in Clearfield county is divided as to the wisdom of my nomination. The work of a campaign in the district with a divided party in Clearfield county is more than I care to undertake for a seat in the next legislature of Pennsylvania.

This will give the Democrats of the district the opportunity of naming a man for the position that they can unite on, and I believe that such a man can be elected if all Democrats give him their support. I trust this will satisfy my friends throughout the district and also end party warfare in our county.

"The remainder of our ticket is not objected to except Senator Grim, our candidate for governor, and I take this opportunity to pay my tribute of respect to him—that he is one of the best and honest [illegible] the state. He is an [illegible] satisfied that their interests will not suffer by reason of his election.

"As a warning to the Democracy of our country I want to add that the efforts of the Republican machine will be to so demoralize our party by using the help of dissatisfied Democrats so as to practically wipe out Democratic opposition to them in the future in our county, and I make the request that you remain loyal to your ticket and refrain from taking any part that true Democrats may have cause to regret, and I also pledge my hearty and active support to every man on our ticket."

How Roosevelt Saved His Camp.

On the same night that Hellen was visited by the lions we had to fight fire in the main camp. At noon we noticed two fires come towards us, and could soon hear their roaring. The tall, thick grass was like tinder; and if we let the fires reach camp we were certain to lose everything we had. So Loring, Mearns, Kermit, and I, who were in camp, got out the porters and cut a lane around our tents and goods; and then started a back fire, section after section, from the other side of this lane. We kept every one ready, with branches and wet gunny-sacks, and lit each section in turn, so that we could readily beat out the flames at any point where they threatened. The air was still, and soon, after nightfall our back fire had burnt fifty or a hundred yards away from camp, and the danger was practically over. Shortly afterward one of the fires against which we were guarding came over a low hill crest into view, beyond the line of our back fire. It was a fine sight to see the long lines of leaping, wavering flames advance toward one another. An hour or two passed before they met, half a mile from camp. Wherever they came together there would be a moment's spurt of roaring, crackling fire, and then it would vanish, leaving at that point a blank in the lines extended, until the fire thus burnt itself out, and darkness succeded the bright red glare.

The fires continued to burn in our neighborhood for a couple of days. Finally one evening the great beds of papyrus across the bay caught fire. After nightfall it was splendid to see the line of flames, leaping fifty feet into the air as they worked across the serried masses of tall payrus. When they came toward the water they kindled the surface of the bay into a ruddy glare, while above them the crimson smoke clouds drifted slowly to leeward. The fire did not die out until toward morning, and then, behind it, we heard the grand booming chorus of a party of lions.

TRIED REMEDY FOR THE GRIP.

The Man Without A Party.

The case of W. J. Bryan is undoubtedly a sad one. He is the Jonah of politics. He caused the downfall and disappearance of the once flourising Populist party; he brought the great Democratic party to the brink of ruin. His fondness for new issues—whether free silver or anti-imperialism, state railways or suppression of the liquor traffic—seems to be the chief cause of his trouble. He can't sit still. He will not stay put. If today he sees the millennium with a gilt edge and a figure of Richard P. Bland descending in glory from the clouds, tomorrow it will wear the aspect of an empty demijohn, accompanied by a vision of John B. Gough. Natually this has bred distrust. The doctor who prescribes herring on his first visit, earmuffs on his second, firecrackers on his third, and a Chautauqua course on his next, as a cure for warts, is likely to lose the confidence of his patient and may get kicked down stairs. This is exactly what has happened to Mr. Bryan. He has hunted paramount issues for the Democratic party for nearly a score of years. He has changed his policies almost as often as his necktie. And at the last shift the disgusted Democrats threw him overboard.

Now comes the saddest part of the tale. This political Jonah can find no abiding-place. The Prohibition whale has refused to swallow him. As Mr. Bryan's last political panacea was one that should have enlisted their warm [illegible] Watkins, of Kansas, for Vice President two years ago has declared that "the Prohibition party will not accept him." He might swallow his pride and knock for admission at the door of the Socialists. But the Socialists are not likely to welcome one who for years has been stealing their thunder to butter his biscuits. So Mr. Bryan is like the "Man Without a Country" in Edward Everett Hale's tale—without kindred, with out flag, without home. It is truly a sad case. All new subscibers to the Commoner ought to receive as a premium a copy of the Democracy's new battle hymn: "Where Is My Wandering Boy To-Night?"—Huntingdon Globe.

How to Hang Pictures.

"Pictures should be hung about on the general eye level, and this rule must be remembered and adapted to the eye level of a child when hanging pictures in a child's room or nursery," says Woman's Home Companion. "The pictures will not be noticed at all if hung too high. Pictures should be grouped according to the simple rule of balance. Taking a central vertical axis on a wall pictures of equal size and general similarity of tone and color value will balance at equal distance from it; or one large picture will balance two pictures of half its size at equal distances from the center. If one has one fairly large picture to balance with several smaller ones the heavy one is to be nearer the center, and this will keep the feeling of balance. If you watch children on a see-saw, it will explain this. If a heavy boy is on one end he moves nearer the center and several smaller boys may be needed to make the balance perfect. A large picture is usually most effective when placed alone in a space with its center coinciding with the center of the space. Two large pictures, one on each side of a mantelpiece, for instance, give a feeling of restfulness and dignity by their perfect balance. Pictures should be grouped in such a way that they have a relation to each other, are balanced on a center and in this way are made to tell as a whole. It is a useful rule to remember that things become disconnected when they are divided by a space exceeding the width or length of the objects themselves. For instance, two pictures each one by two feet when hanging one above the other must not be more than one foot apart, and not more than two feet apart when side by side.

"Pictures should be hung from two hooks, and there should never be a triangle formed by the wire and the top of the picture-frame. The construction lines of the room are straight and the picture wires should also be straight. It is better not to have the support of small pictures show, as it makes too great a complexity of wires. Tacks or small picture nails may be used, according to the size and weight of the picture."

STATE BOY HONORED

Appointed Signal Apprentice in P. R. R. Training School.

The increasing demand for greater safety and facility in railroad operation has caused the Pennsylvania Railroad to institute a new plan of training men to maintain and operate its signals. Accordingly, there have just been appointed four Signal Apprentices: Jacob Bright, graduate of Lehigh 1910, L. J. Philips, graduate of Sheffield Scientific School, Yale 1910, A. W. Fisher, 1910 graduate of Pennsylvania State College, and A. H. Tasker, graduate of Yale, 1910, Sheffield Scientific School.

The different divisions of the Lines East of Pittsburg have started signal schools where experienced signalmen give instruction to the division signal employes in regard to the proper operation and maintenance of the different signal and interlocking appliances.

The importance of this step is indicated by the fact that, whereas, in 1902 there were but 7, 891 interlocking functions in operation on the Lines East of Pittsburg, in 1908 this number was 20,725—having just about tripled in a period of six years. These 20,725 functions are operated by 8,792 levers. A total of 12,408 signals are in service, covering 3,385 miles of road, or over 70 per cent of mileage.

Signal apprentices will serve a three years course. The first year will be spent on the mechanical end of the work with the repair and construction gangs, the second year in the office of the Supervisor of Signals, and the third year on outside work on electric and electro-pneumatic appliances. They will report to the Supervisor of Signals while taking this course.

The next place open to there men is the position of Assistant Signal Inspector in the Signal Engineer's Office. After attaining this they will be considered in line of appointment to the following positions: Assistant Supervisor of Signals, Supervisor of Signals, Inspector, Assistant Signal Engineer, and Signal Engineer.

The Nest of Gold.

"O mamma, please let Hannah cut it off, please do." This is what little Harold Carter cried, as he leaned against his mother's knee one August morning. He was talking about his hair—his long hair, which hung round his shoulders in golden curls.

His mamma passed her hands over those tumbled curls, and pushed them off from her little boy's hot face.

"They are no use," urged Harold, "no use at all."

His mamma smiled. "Ah, Harold," she said, "they are some use, they give them such a hot day, you will think they gave much pleasure."

"If you were a girl," said his mother, "I could pin them up on the top of your head."

"But I am not a girl, I'm a boy, and I'm getting a bigger boy every day."

"Hannah," said Harold's mother to the nurse, "get the scissors. Cut off Harold's hair; but I don't want to see you do it." Then she left the room very quickly.

Very, very soon the golden curls were snipped off and placed in a pretty box. All but one, which had blown out of the window, and been carried out of sight.

"There," said Harold, "now mamma can look at them all she wants to. They do look like gold, and so much prettier than they did on my head. But they are no use."

Many weeks after this happened Harold was passing some shrubs at the end of the garden, and saw in their branches a bird's nest. As it seemed to be a nest left by its little builders he reached up his hand and broke the twig on which it was built.

"I declare," he explained, he peered into the nest, "as true as live, here is my lost curl."

Sure enough, the nest was lined with a soft, silky curl of hair exactly like Harold's.

He ran into the house at once to show it to his mamma.

"Yes," she said, "there is no doubt about it, it is your lost curl. It makes the nest a nest of gold."

"Oh, mamma," cried Harold, what a lucky thing for the birds that had my hair cut. One curl was some use, any way."

"Ah," laughed mamma, as she kissed her boy. "Cropped heads aren't bad after all, I find."—Philadelphia [illegible].

LABOR VOTE WILL LINE UP FOR TENER

Republican Nominee Popular With Workingmen.

FROM MILL BOY TO GOVERNOR

Former President of Amalgamated Iron and Steel Workers Tells of Interest of Candidate In Wageearners.

[Special Correspondence.]

Pittsburg, Aug. 30.

Although the gubernatorial campaign in Pennsylvania has hardly gotten well under way, one fact has been demonstrated, and that is that John Kinley Tener, the Republican nominee for governor, is going to be one of the most popular candidates with the workingmen that ever ran on a state ticket.

This is not surprising to those familiar with his record and who have followed his course both in private and public life.

His whole history is that of a man who has worked hard himself and who is in full sympathy with labor by reason of his associations with the wage earners from his boyhood days.

Any one who, like Mr. Tener, had to begin at the very bottom of life's ladder and depend upon his own energy and resources to win success can appreciate his concern for the welfare of his fellow men, especially those who make up the great industrial army of this state and nation

"From Mill Boy to Governor" is a slogan already heard among the enthusiastic admirers of a former worker in one of the great steel plants of western Pennsylvania, and as the canvass shall progress and the great body of the voters shall become more intimately acquainted with the career and the policies of the Republican nominee for governor, it is predicted that he will grow in popularity and strength with the inevitable result—an overwhelming victory at the polls on Nov. 8.

An idea of the enthusiasm with which the nomination of Mr. Tener is being received and of the reasons for the interest shown in his candidacy by representatives of organized labor may be had from a chat with M. M. Garland, a former president of the Amalgamated Iron and Steel Workers, who has known Mr. Tener for many years.

"John K. Tener is essentially a self made man," said Mr. Garland. "He has ever been interested in the cause of the workingman, and today classes among his very best friends men who have been and are high in the ranks of labor organizations.

"Tener's first occupation was as an errand boy and then as assistant shipping clerk at the mill of Lewis, Oliver & Phillips, South Side, Pittsburg. He was then advanced to pay roll clerk. His associates were the men of the mills, and it was while he was employed at the plant of the Olivers, at South Tenth street, he formed very close friendships with Miles P. Humphreys, who had just retired as president of the Amalgamated Iron and Steel Workers, then in charge of the puddling and muck iron departments; the late William Weihe, then a puddler; "Jack" Davis, a well known boss roller, and others who were high in labor circles.

Once Ran a Locomotive.

"Tener spent most of his spare time in the mills and mill yards, and as a result he obtained a thorough knowledge of the practical end of the business. He soon mastered locomotive engineering and was often found on the engines in and about the plant, and when a regular engineer was off duty on account of sickness he would take his place for weeks at a time.

"When Tener left the industrial field to take up base ball he was a firm believer in organization, and during the closing months of 1889 he, with several other base ball players, joined in a movement which resulted in the Brotherhood of Base Ball Players, and which had for its object the betterment of the conditions then imposed upon the players, and the extent of this move has had its effect ever since.

"Tener became a resident of Charleroi at its inception, and is known to nearly every man, woman and child in that town, and as the men pass by they address him as 'John,' and he in turn salutes them as 'Hello, Bill,' or 'How are you, Sam?" as the case may be.

As a Friend of Labor.

"For several years he was engaged in the glass business at Buckhannon, West Virginia, where only union men were employed, and in all business in which he has been engaged or has had a controlling interest, the very highest wages have been paid. At the beginning of the strike at the Macbeth-Evans glass factory at Charleroi, the men appealed to Tener, and he was instrumental in securing a conference between representatives of the workmen and their employers. He was again called upon during a strike at the works of the Charleroi Coal company to intercede in behalf of the miners, and in this he was successful in assisting in an agreement satisfactory to both sides and winning the praise of the wage earners.

A Reliable Medicine—Not a Narcotic.

Mrs. F. Marti, St Joe, Mich., says Foley's Honey and Tar saved her little boys's life. She writes: "Our little boy contracted a severe bronchial trouble and as the doctor's medicine did not cure him, I gave him Foley's Honey and Tar in which I have great faith. It cured the cough as well as the choking and gagging spells, and he got well in a short time. Foley's Honey and Tar has many times saved us much trouble and we are never without it in the house." Weak Heart Action

There are certain nerves that control the action of the heart. When they become weak, the heart action is impaired. Short breath, pain around heart, choking sensation, palpitation, fluttering, feeble or rapid pulse, and other distressing symptoms follow. Dr. Miles Heart Cure is a medicine especially adapted to the needs of these nerves and the muscular structure of the heart itself. It is a strengthening tonic that brings speedy relief. Try it.

"For years I suffered with what I thought was stomach trouble, when the doctors told me I had heart trouble. I had tried many remedies, when the Dr. Miles' almanac came into my hands, and I concluded to try Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. I have taken three bottles, and now I am not suffering at all. I am cured and this medicine did it. I write this in the hope that it will attract the attention of others who suffer as I did."

INDIANS PLAN POW-WOW

Great Festival, Possibly Last, Will be Held at Muskogee.

Perhaps one of the most unique and picturesque meetings ever held in the Western Hemisphere will be the great pow-wow of representatives ofevery Indian tribe on the American Continent at Muskagee, Oka., beginning October 10 next and lasting four days. It will be the second conclave of the kind ever held in this country, and perhaps the last great gathering of the American Indian. The first meeting of the kind was held in 1876, when the aboriginees gathered from all parts of the country.

It is expected that thousands of people from all over the country, including cabinet members, officials of the interior Department, representatives of the Indian Rights Association, United States senators, magazine writers, special news writers, historians, the chiefs and prominent braves of every tribe from Baffin's Bay to the Caribbean Sea will be there.

Gov. Haskell and each of the chiefs of the five civilized tribes, Gov. Johnston of the Chickasaws, Gov. Moty Tiger of the Creeks, Gov. Brown of the Seminoles and Chief Green McCurtain of the Choctaws, will meet in Muskogee in a few days and sign the official call of the great International Indian Congress of America.

It is given out flatly that it is not the intention of the promoters to stage a Wild West show. There will be no cowboys or tepees of the wild West character. The only thing of the wild West complexion will be the tents of the blanket Indians who journey here to attend the pow-wow. It is the intention that the Indians will meet and organize and take some action relative to Indian affairs, foremost of which will be a dignified memorial, signed by the chiefs of all tribes of North America, pleading for legislation that will give the Indian a better standing in the country.

United States Senators Curtis of Kansas and Owen of Oklahoma have been placed on some important committees, as has also Commissioner of Indian Affairs R. G. Valentine.

Quanah Parker, the famous Comanche chief has notified the local committee that he will head a large delegation to the Indian congress. William F. Coly (Buffalo Bill) and Pawnee Bill have also written the committe and expressed a desire to participate in the last great pow-wow of the American red men. Maj. James McLaughlin, the veteran United States Indian inspector, who laid the plans that brought about the capture of Sitting Bull and later brought the old warrior into Miles City, has been placed on a prominent committee and he said that he will be in attendance. Mcaughlin will be joined by W. A. Lubes of Muskogee, who was a scout under Gen. George Custer and one of the few men who escaped being wiped out during the Custer massacre. Lubbes was perhaps the first white man on the battle scene after the massacre.

Millinery College the Latest.

A college of millinery in which every branch of the art of making women's hats will be taught and which will, in addition, be a headquarters for importers, designers and other dealers is to be founded by the National Association of Retail Milliners, in session last week in Chicago. Plans for a fourteen-story building to cost $250,000 have been drawn, but its location has not been fixed. Whether it will be a Chicago institution or go to New York depends on which city offers the most money for it.

Among the branches to be taught will be the drawing of hats in their original colors for catalogue and advertising purposes. At present it is said that only Parisians can do this work correctly. Many of these artists receive as high as $200 a week.

The big hats are to be bigger and the small hats are to be smaller than ever, and according to milliners who have just returned from Paris there are to be no medium size hats.

A lot of new shades have been invented and will be used extensively in trimming hats during the coming months. Among these Parisian colors are magnolia, a shade of orange, danalk, a coral red; Pompeilian, a dead rose; herue, a light mahogany, and heather and acajon, both raisin colored.

"In most of the new hats the more brilliant colors will be veiled in softer shades of chiffon," said Mme. Maerie, president of the association. "Plumes, birds of Paradise and long feathers will be used a great deal, and long, large wings will be much in vogue," she added. "Oriental and Persian effects are also very much sought after, gold laces and tapestry being used to obtain them. There are to be no radical departures from the styles of the last season."

How to Build a Camp-Fire.

Gather a small armful of sound, dry twigs from the size of a lead pencil to that of your finger. Take no twig that lies flat on the ground, for such are generally damp or rotten. Choose hardwood, if there is any, for it lasts well. Select three of your best sticks for kindling. Shave each of them almost through, for half its length, leaving lower end of shavings attached to the stick, one under the other. Stand these in a tripod, under the hanging pot, with their curls down. Around them build a conical wigwam of the other sticks, standing each on end and slanting to a common center. Leave free air spaces between the sticks. Fire requires air, and plenty of it, and it burns best when it has something to climb up on; hence the wigwam construction. Now touch off the shaved sticks, and in a moment you will have a small blast furnace under the pot. This will get up steam in a hurry.

Meantime get two bed sticks, 5 or 6 inches thick, to support the frying pan. The firewood will all drop to embers soon after the pot boils. Toss out the smoking butts, leaving only clear, glowing coals. Put your bed sticks on either side, parallel and level. So in fifteen or twenty minutes from the time you drove your stake, the meal will be cooked.—Outing Magazine.

THE "THIRD DEGREE."

Ethics of the Process as Defined by Inspector Byrnes.

"The 'third degree,'" said Inspector Byrnes, the former chief of detectives, "should be a psychic rather than a physical process. It is not remorse brought about by continual thought upon the heinousness of his crime that drives a guilty man to confession. It is the nervous strain involved in a long effort to maintain his pretense of innocence, while he is in constant fear that the police are in possession of evidence that may prove his guilt. Something like a parallel case would be that of a prizefighter who should surmise that his antagonist was playing with him in the ring while capable of sending in a knockout blow at any time he felt so inclined. Apprehension that he was dealing with conditions of the nature of which he was unaware would eventually weaken the man in that case. Tell a suspected man who is guilty that you have evidence of his guilt and that he will get nothing to eat or will not be permited to sleep until he confesses, and unless he is a particularly stupid fellow he will know that you have no proof against him and are only trying to get it. For instance, show him ostentatiously the weapon with which he may have killed a man and tell him that you know all about the crime and he would better confess it. He will say to himself, 'They haven't got sufficient evidence to convict me and are trying to make me furnish it, for if they had the evidence they wouldn't care whether I confessed or not,' and thus he will be encouraged to hold out. Also, if he does confess under duress, he makes a false confession, which he knows it will be impossible to corroborate.

"Now, a guilty man in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred is not sure that he has covered every trace of his crime, and he may readily be put into the state of mind of the man in Poe's story of 'The Telltale Heart,' wherein he can't help believing that proof of his guilt has been discovered and that his cross examiners are mocking him by pretending not to be aware of it. Let the guilty man catch sight of an implement with which his crime is associated in the possession of the police, which he believes has been unintentionally left where he sees it, and it throws him into a panic, because he does not know how they came by the weapon nor what else they may have discovered demonstrating his guilt in getting hold of it. Perhaps he has concocted a story in his mind which the discovery of this weapon renders implausible, and he mentally puts together and rejects one sequence of lies after another, wondering whether it is safe to take chances on this bit of information or that being not in the possession of the police. Then he is overwhelmed every few moments by the thought that everything is known and all his efforts are useless. The guilty man in this condition is no longer normal, and his collapse is only a matter of time." — Frank Marshall White in Harper's Weekly.

He Had Reformed.

A young man who was an enthusiastic lover of nature went to the seaside for a holiday and, approaching a typical fisherman, said:

"Ah, my friend, how well you must know the face of nature and know it in its many moods! Have you ever seen the sun sinking in such a glare of glory that it swallows up the horizon with fire? Have you not seen the mist gliding down the shrinking hillside like a specter?"

And, very excited and throwing out his arms, he continued:

"Have you never seen, my man, the moon struggling to shake off the ragged, rugged storm cloud?"

The fisherman replied, "No, sir; I have not since I signed the pledge."—Pearson's Weekly.

A Little Ambiguous.

The Ingrahams were entertaining two friends at dinner. After Mr. Ingraham had helped them to roast beef he happened to glance at the other end of the table, where his wife sat, and observed, to his horror, that the sugar bowl was the old one, with both handles broken off, that usually graced the dining table on wash days.

In vain he endeavored by mysterious nods and winks to direct Mrs. Ingraham's attention to it. She either did not see or would not see the mutilated piece of queensware, and his patience gave way at last.

"Cornelia," he said, with some sharpness, "do you think we ought to use a sugar bowl when we have company without ears on?"—Youth's Companion.

Suspicious.

"Let me show you 'Love Letters of Wise Men.'" said the clerk in the book emporium.

"Are they signed?" asked the cautious bookworm.

"Yes, indeed, every one of them."

"Then they must be forgeries. Wise men never sign their names to love letters."—Chicago News.

GRAIN FEVER

Relative to Hay Fever that Attacks Longshoremen on the Lakes.

When the freighters on the great lakes tie up at Chicago to unload their cargoes of merchandise from the East and load with grain there is hard work ahead for the longshoremen and also good pay. The men who stow the grain form a class by themselves. Most of them do no other work and remain idle if there is no boat lying at the elevator docks.

These periods of idleness are followed by labor of the hardest kind. Stripped to the waist the grain stowers stand in the hold with the flood of yellow grain pouring down through the elevator chute and shovel for dear life.

It is not an infrequent occurance to hear a cry for help followed by a shouting of orders to cut off the grain. This means, says the New York Sun, that a stower has been caught and half burried in the grain, and that his fellows have dropped everything to dig him out. The stower's plight would be serious were it not for quick action of his fellows, and not infrequently he is carried out of the hold unconscious.

To be caught in the grain, although a serious matter at the time, becomes the subject of many a joke afterward. According to the code of his fellows he should have been able to take care of himself.

The stowers are fine specimens physically. Most of them are over 6 feet tall, and the heavy work with the grain has given them the backs and shoulders of Hercules. Their pay is very high for men whose labor can not be classed as skilled.

Most of them are inveterate gamblers and at dinner hour when they climb out of the hold to eat their lunch in the 'tween decks, the cards are pretty sure to follow the meal and a quarrel often follows the cards. No one interferes so long as the men make fists their weapons but when, as sometimes happens, one of them grabs up a shovel or pulls a knife his companions are quick to disarm him and bundle him ashore.

Hardy as the men are, there is one enemy they fear. This is grain fever, a kind of aggravated hay fever, that attacks those who work in the dust-filled atmosphere of a grain boat's hold. To protect themselves from the fever the men wear large bunches of oakum over their mouths and noses. To a person looking down into the dust-filled hold it seems as if a whole family of Father Neptunes were at work with shovels in place of tridents.

The grain fever frequently attacks members of the boat's crew who go about their work unprotected. Light attacks result in nothing worse than dizziness and a slight headache, but severe cases in entire unconsciousness which may last for twelve hours. There is apparently no bad after effect from the grain fever, for the sufferer awakes after his long sleep with a clear head and no feeling of lassitude.

When the grain carrier reaches her home port, sometimes on the lower lakes and sometimes as far away as Ogdensburg, on the St. Lawrence River, the grain is cleared from the hold by great pneumatic shovels tended by gangs of hand shovelers who keep the grain in the path of the great scoop.

After the hold is empty the dock hands are sent down to sweep out and prepare for a new cargo. This is another dusty job, and usually most of the men who escaped the fever during the loading fall victims now. It is a strange thing about the fever that a man who has had it during the loading is immune for some time and seldom has trouble when sweeping out the hold.

Roosevelt's Trip to West.

Former President Roosevelt has started on a tour which promises to be more important than any he took while in the White House. From now until September 11 he will be traveling through the country making speeches of profound significance, and exercising a great influence upon national affairs.

Baldness of His Hens.

Deputy Sheriff George O. Klepper of Lock Haven, who keeps some fine chickens at his home, is very much perturbed at the condition of two fine specimens of his flock, a buff leghorn hen and a white Wyandotte hen, both of which are completely denuded of their feathers, a condition which he says is not due to molting in the ordinary way, says the Lock Haven Democrat. Another exceptional feature of these hens' condition is that the Wyandotte hen continues to lay an egg every day (Sundays not excepted) while the leghorn hen confines her egg product in a more limited way, to an egg just when she feels like it, but both continue to lay, which is contrary to hen rule, when they are molting. To meet and overcome this unseemly and strange condition George is searching through all the poultry journals at his command for a parallel case, hoping to find a remedy for the peculiar malady. However, there is no fear that the two faithful "Biddies" will remain uncloaked during the coming cold weather for George says, each one has already started a nice thick coat of down like feathers which has already nearly concealed their nudeness and which makes them much more presentable to their associated companions. If some one can relieve the mind of this public official let him speak through these columns.

TWO OLD PENNIES

Received by John Crossmire in Monthly Pay as Civil War Soldier.

An interesting story of two old pennies is that related a day or two ago by John Crossmire, of Curtin. Both pennies were received by him in his monthly pay as a soldier in the Civil war. Both were carried by him until last week, when he presented one to Captain H. S. Taylor and the other to J. Homer Decker, assistant clerk to the County Commissioners.

Mr. Crossmire was a member of the Twelfth Pennsylvania Reserves and later was transferred to the Fifty-first Regiment, under General Hartranft, who subsequently became Governor of Pennsylvania,

One of the pennies bears the date of 1861. It was in that year that Mr. Crossmire received it. His monthly pay consisted of a check for $13, a three cent stamp and the penny in question. This he received while at Washington.

The second penny bears the date of 1862, in which year he received it at Newburn, North Carolina. It also was received in his monthly pay. For a time Mr. Crossmire served under Captain William H. Blair, a brother of Frank P. Blair, the jeweller at Bellefonte.

Paper Money to be Smaller.

If bankers and business men throughout the United States give their approval treasury notes of all denominations will be reduced in size by one-third at a saving of about $1,000,000 a year to Uncle Sam, and the change will be made within so short a time as to be considered sudden.

It is the belief of Lee McClung, assistant treasurer of the United States, that the idea of reducing and making the notes more simple will meet with the approbation of the banking world. The banks will not only be able to place more of the currency in their vaults, but the fact that the money will be kept flat by the public will make it many times easier to handle and count when it comes into the banks.

The plan is to make the new bills just large enough to fit ordinary pocketbooks without folding. It is the folding that destroys their texture. Bills are said to last no more than six months with constant use. They can be made to last much longer if made smaller and the saving of material and ink in addition will combine to work an inestimable economy.

Business men and bankers of the country are to be solicited as to the feasibility of the idea. If the idea meets public approval three weeks will mark the change.

The paper upon which the currency is printed costs $1.40 a pound. In cutting the note down to two-thirds size 46 cents will be saved on each pound of paper, used.

Opening of Bellefonte Academy.

The Bellefonte Academy will open its fall session on Tuesday afternoon, September 13th, at 2 o'clock, with the strongest corps of teachers employed in many years.

Tuition for day pupils in academic grade $52.00 per year, payable quarterly; for primary pupils $42.00 per year.

While books are an extra, they can be sold for two-thirds their value when pupils are through with them.

Pupils at the Academy receive individual attention daily and recite every day. This attention guarantees success. Pupils select subjects they need for their future success.

Berry Speaks at Boalsburg.

William H. Berry, Keystone party nominee for Governor, was the principal speaker at the annual Boalsburg picnic, held on Friday of last week. Lawyer A. A. Dale, of Bellefonte, was another speaker and greatly pleased his audience with his eloquence. The day was ideal for an outing in the woods and a large crowd was in attendence, as is always the case with this reunion of the residents of that part of the county. George N. Fisher was chairman of the Committee on Arrangements and nothing was left undone to contribute to the comfort and enjoyment of all present.

MRS. GEORGE W. WOLF

Well Known Resident of Fiedler Dies of Heart Trouble.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Wolf, wife of George W. Wolf, of Fiedler, died at her late home at that place on Wednesday of last week. She had been suffering from dropsey since last winter, death being due to heart failure. Deceased was aged 49 years and was a splendid woman. Her death is mourned by a large number of admiring friends.

Surviving are a husband and three sons and one daughter, as follows: Charles, of Aaronsburg; Thomas, of Woodward; Sumner J., of Howard, and Mrs. Anna Glantz, of Fiedler. She was a member of the United Evangelical church. Funeral services were held on Saturday morning, at 10 o'clock, being conducted by Rev. Mr. Deiser. Interment was made in the Union cemetery, at Woodward.

DEATH OF W. H. MOKLE

Aged Resident of State College Passes Away on Saturday.

After an illness that extended over a period of several months, William H. Mokle died on Saturday evening at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Frank Smith, at State College. Funeral services were held yesterday, interment being made at Houserville.

For many years Mr. Mokle resided at Lemont, later removing to State College. In more recent years he lived a retired life. Prior to that, however, he was a tinner by trade. Deceased was aged 75 years, 8 months and 23 days. Surviving are a widow, one daughter, Mrs. Smith, and one son, John Mokle, the latter residing at Howard.

MISS SUSAN MILES.

Death on Thursday, last, closed the long and interesting life of Miss Susan Miles, a well known and highly respected resident of Milesburg. News of her death was received by her numerous Bellefonte friends later in the day. Funeral services were held on Saturday, at 10.30 o'clock, interment being made in the Union cemetery, at Bellefonte. Miss Miles was a daughter of the late James and Rachael Valentine Miller Miles and was born at Milesburg forge, April 2, 1832, making her age 78 years, 5 months and 23 days. Her mother was a sister of Isaac Miller and also of the late Mrs. William A. Thomas. She died when Susan was a little girl, after which time the latter went to live with her aunt, Mrs. Joseph Green. She was never married but continued to make her home with and care for her adopted parents until their death. With the late J. Miles Green she continued to keep open the old Miles homestead, at Milesburg. A devout Christian woman, Miss Miles lived a life that was useful and helpful to many others, by her kindly ways and gentle manner endearing herself to a wide circle of friends, all of whom sorrow in her passing away.

MRS. SARAH G. BOOZER.

At the home of her daughter, Mrs. P. M. Glasgow, at Bellwood, Mrs. Sarah G. Boozer died at 1.45 p. m., Saturday, August 13th, of diseases incident to old age. She was born in Boalsburg, February 4, 1825, being at her death aged eighty-five years, six months and nine days. Her maiden name was Price. On January 28, 1851, she married John Boozer, to which union were born three children—William Henry, Anna Marjory and Frances Isabella, now Mrs. Glasgow. They lived in Centre county, for the greater part of the time at Potters Mills, until 1876, her husband being for many years one of the proprietors of the woolen mills at that place. After sojourning in Ohio for a short time, they returned to Pennsylvania, and located in Philadelphia, later moving to Milroy, where her husband died April 20, 1877. She resided in Milroy six years, and since she has made her home with her children. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Glasgow, (her son and other daughters having preceded her to the grave,) six grand-children and two great-grandchildren. Centre Hall Reporter.

JOHN NOLEN.

John Nolen, one of Flemington's best citizens, was found dead seated in a rocking chair at his late home, at Flemington, on Friday night, last. Earlier in the evening Mr. Nolen, with his son, I. B. Nolen, had attended a meeting at the Methodist Episcopal church. He was apparently in good health when he returned home. A short time after this his son found him dead. An open testament was in his right hand and his head was resting on the back of the chair, as if asleep. It was not until members of the family spoke to him that it was discovered he was dead. Deceased was a miller by trade and was aged about 50 years. He is survived by two sons, I. B. and J. R., and two brothers, James, of Huston, and Dempster, of Seattle, Wash. A half-brother, A. C. Confer, of Mill Hall, and a sister, Mrs. William Ullery, of Erie, also survive.

MRS. ELIZA GRAZIER.

Mrs. Eliza Grazier, one of Tyrone's oldest and best known residents, died at her late home at that place on Friday, last, after an extended illness. Deceased was the widow of Abednego Grazier, who died in October 1895. Before her marriage, on December 25, 1857, she was Miss Eliza N. Rush, and was born at Beech Creek, December 13, 1836. When about eight years of age she removed with her parents to Bald Eagle, where she remained until her marriage. For a time she and her husband were engaged in farming at Warriors-Mark, later removing to Tyrone.

MRS. J. FRANK COLLINS.

Mrs. Catherine Collins, wife of Rev. J. Frank Collins, pastor of the Free Methodist church, died suddenly on Saturday, at her late home, in Bush addition. She had been in poor health for some time, her death being caused by heart failure. Deceased was aged about 36 years and is survived by her husband and three children, Ruth, Paul and Helen. The remains were removed to Pittsburg, where interment was made on Monday.

Enjoyed Corn Roast.

A delightful corn roast at Humes woods, near Bellefonte, was greatly enjoyed by a jolly crowd of young folks on Thursday night, last. Heavily laden baskets served as the handwriting on the wall as to what was to come and the good things to eat were disposed of with the same rapidity as if discharged from an automatic gun. Sidney Keifer was unanimously elected fireman and chief corn roaster and he served to the complete satisfaction of his constituents. After the banquet the corn roast gave way to a dodging bee and it was a lucky person who escaped being walloped with a corn cob. Those present included Misses Helen Robb, Edna Koontz, Keturah Rider, Nora Loveland, Myrtle Williams, Florence Lamb, Nettie Bair, Inez Cronemiller, Sue Wallace, Bernice Wallace, Lizzie Barnhart, Edith Payne, Mrs. Harry Murtroff, Mrs. Crissie Tanner and Pearl Whippo, of Wilkinsburg, and Mabel Gentzel, of Beaver Falls, the last two mentioned being guests of Miss Rider. Those who were supposed to carry the baskets but ate the most corn were Wilbur Burkholder, Harry Murtroff, J. Homer Decker, Edward Decker, Alfred Klepfler, Norman Kirk, Milan Walker, Robert Tressler, Van Jodon, David Washburn, Sidney Keifer, Mr. Davis, Clarence Smith, Mr. Conn, Richard Reimer, William McShea and Edward Gayton. The last three named are from Philadelphia.

Rural Carriers Execute Vouchers.

Under a recent act of Congress 40 000 rural delivery mail carriers were made notaries public and will be required to execute pension vouchers for pensioners residing on the respective routes. A carrier may not execute his own voucher. To have vouchers executed, pensioners must meet carriers on their routes or arrange to meet them at their own or at the carriers' homes.

Ciny Kreamer to Have Sale.

Ciny Kreamer, who lives one-half mile northwest of State College, will have public sale on Saturday, next, at 1 o'clock. He will offer for sale three horses, two good cows, 125 chickens, lot of farm implements, wagons, etc. Harry L. Grove will be auctioneer. The several articles to be offered for sale are all in splendid condition, thus affording buyers an exceptional opportunity for bargains.

Williams Reunion.

Katherine Motter, died July 19, 1910.

"Your committee recommend that these names and dates be recorded on the minutes of the association and that as an association we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the immediate families of the deceased.

"E. J. WILLIAMS,
"A. S. WILLIAMS,
"Committee."

While Charles E. Patton, the Republican nominee for Congress, spent the greater part of the day on the grounds as the guest of County Treasurer George G. Fink, there was no political speech-making. Mr Patton was invited to deliver an address but he declined, explaining that he was greatly enjoying himself and that he preferred that the speech-making should not touch upon politics. William C. Heinle, Mr. Patton's Democratic opponent, also spent the day on the grounds.

Potters Mills

Joseph Carson has been confined to his bed with pneumonia but is somewhat improved at this writing.

The Sunday School picnic and festival held for the benefit of the United Evangelical church, at Locust grove, on Saturday, was a decided success. A very reasonable sum was realized, which will be used in making numerous needed repairs.

Logan Decker and Lloyd Ripka were out surveying the country on Saturday night, having stopped at the Locust grove festival and finishing the day by attending the show at Potters Mill.

Ezra Ripha, of Sober, spent a few days at his old home here.

W. C. Lingle, an employee of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, at Burnham, was a caller at the John D. Decker home.

Alex Mc. and Miss Alice Decker enjoyed a drive to the latter's home on Sunday.

A jolly crowd from Laurelton attended the festival and picnic on Saturday. Included were Misses Irene Harter, Gertrude Lingle, Esther Peck and James Lingle, Victor Lingle and Guy Harter.

Unionville.

Our barber, H. C. Peters, has added another curiosity to his museum. It is a black rattle snake, 3 feet long and with nine rattles. A number of our people have never seen a rattle snake. Here is a fine specimen of the most poisonous snake known, on exhibition in Mr. Peters' window.

Mrs. Daniel Hall left on Thursday for Atlantic City and Ocean Grove, where where she will spend ten days.

Our town was vacated on Saturday, almost everybody going to the Williams reunion, at Martha Furnace. Milt Peters, John Waleslagle and John Spotts were detained to watch things. They certainly did the job up brown, not a thing being disturbed or molested.

Our boys crossed bats with the strong Milesburg team, at the latter place, on Thursday, being defeated to the tune of 4—0. The Unionville boys put up a good game and should have won, having men on second and third three times, but the necessary bingle was not forth-coming, Milesburg's pitcher tightening up when hits meant runs. Peters pitched a good game, allowing but three hits.

D. Buck unloaded a car of shelled corn last week.

Professor V. L. Wagner is all smiles. Is it any wonder? The stork left a six pound baby girl at his home on Thursday morning. We are glad to say that both mother and babe are doing nicely.

The coal business is booming in our town at present, almost everybody laying in a supply for winter. Four cars were unloaded last week.

Rev. Dr. Elmer L. Williams, of the Second Methodist Episcopal church, of Chicago, this week, visited his brother, Ed.

On Sunday morning, last, a burglar gained entrance to Mrs. Melisa Bing's residence, going through the lower part of the house and cellar. The burglar was evidently hungry as he helped himself to a kettle of boiled beef, bread, eggs and other eatables. Mrs. Bing did not hear the intruder and was ignorant of the robbery until she came down stairs on Sunday morning, when she found dishes, pans and kettles in almost every corner. No other trace of the burglar could be found.

Blanchard.

The property of Mrs. J. A. Quigley, of Blanchard, and Mrs. C. Wilbur Ross, of Peoria, Illinois, has been sold to Everet Packer. The latter, with his family, recently removed here from Virginia. The property, which consists of a house, barn and several acres of land, was rented for a number of years by William L. Dewitt.

Madeline, the six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Creamer, of Blanchard, seems to be having more then her share of hard luck. About six months ago her right arm was broken and on Saturday, last, she had the misfortune to have the same arm again fractured, this time in two places. While playing with several other children one of the boys looped her with a rope about the waist. She fell heavily to the ground causing the fracture, as stated.

After a very delightful visit at the hospitable home of Captain and Mrs. James A. Quigley, Mr. and Mrs. C. Wilbur Ross departed on Friday for their home, in Illinois.

It will be learned with regret by the numerous friends of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Kunes that the latter are ill with typhoid fever in the Lock Haven hospital. They had been in charge of the cooking for one of the DuBois lumber camps, along the Susquehanna river, and with several others were stricken with typhoid fever. The condition of Mrs. Kunes is such as cause no little alarm among her friends.

Russell Bechdel and Charles Steck, of McKeesport, returned to that place, on Thursday, to resume their duties in the tube works.

Harris Clark and Lena Bechdel returned home last week from Atlantic City, reporting having had a most delightful trip.

Mrs. William Harter and daughter, May, visited at Mt. Eagle on Tuesday.

Miss Mary Bowan, of Lock Haven, came home on Tuesday to visit her mother, who is quite ill.

Mrs. Thomas Lingle is again very ill and with little hope of her recovery.

The directors are very busy getting the schools houses papered and cleaned for the opening of school, on September 12.

Mrs. Mary Eagan and Mrs. William Bowes were visitors at the Lock Haven hospital on Tuesday, calling on the sick from our village. All of the latter, three in number, we are glad to note, are improving.

Mt. Eagle.

Mr. Beatty, who lives back in the hills, went to Altoona on Monday to see his daughter.

Pretty nearly everybody in Mt. Eagle took in the business men's picnic, at Hecla.

Mrs. Thomas Shaughnessy, Jr., of Bellefonte, spent Wednesday of last week with her father, J. R. Pheasant. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shaughnessy, of Pittsburg, were callers on the same day, as were also Mrs. Mac. Heinle and son, of Bellefonte.

Your correspondent was a delegate to the Epworth League convention, at Milesburg, on the 26th and had a very nice time. The people of Milesburg opened their kind hearts and just treated everybody in royal style. The several sessions were interesting and instructive.

On Sunday afternoon, Mr. Claycomb, of Altoona, representing the Anti-Saloon League, spoke in the M. E. church.

A couple of Curtin's fair damsels had supper at the home of Theodore Leathers one day last week.

Miss Alice McMonigal, of Bellwood, spent Sunday with her father, J. S. McMonigal.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Laird, of Bellefonte, visited for a few days with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. William Lego and daughter spent a week at the seashore. They report having had a delightful time.

A number of our folks attended the Williams reunion on Saturday.

Wesley Weaver recently had some hard luck. He bought a horse, only to have it die the next day.

On Saturday evening quite a few of the young folks gathered at the home of Alonzo Nearhoof to help him celebrate his birthday. The young man was much surprised. All present had a most delightful time. Refreshments were served and all returned home wishing Alonzo many happy returns of the day.

The World's Wheat.

Estimates of the world's wheat crop are crystallizing in the neighborhood of 3,500,000,000 bushels, a decrease of 150,000,000 bushels from last year, but with that exception the largest yield ever gathered. Estimates of total supply range about equal to last season, owing to larger supplies carried over on July 1. —Bradstreet's.

Runville.

Miss Tacy Lucas gave a "corn boil" at her country home, in Runville on Monday evening, prior to departing for Altoona. Miss Ethel Brubaker, of 300 Walnut Avenue, Altoona, was the guest of honor. Those in attendance included Frank Warner, of Wingate; Orvis Lucas, Lloyd Watkins, Newton Loucke, Merrill, Claire and Lee Poorman, Olive Lucas, Maude Walker, Sarah Loucke, Elsie Walker, Florence Lucas, Anna Loucke, Minnie Witherite, Ethel Brubaker, Mabel Flick, Tacy Lucas and Roy Fetzer, the last named being from Williamsport.

Woman's Club to Meet.

The next regular meeting of the Woman's Club of Bellefonte will be held tomorrow (Friday) afternoon, at 3.30 o'clock, at Petrikin Hall. A large attendance is desired, there being a number of important questions to be considered.

"BACK TO THE FARM"

VII.—How Some Men Have Succeeded on the Farm.

By C. V. GREGORY.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

THERE are many millionaire farmers, but most of them have made their millions elsewhere and are spending them on rural estates merely to gratify a fancy. There are a number of men, however, who have made millions on the farm. It is not such an easy thing to do, but the success of these men shows some of the possibilities that the farm holds for the man who desires to make money in large amounts.

Probably the most notable of the men who have made fortunes on the farm is David Rankin. When David Rankin was married he handed the preacher his last five dollar bill with the remark that now he could start square with the world. He bought land on time and borrowed money to buy cattle. His first purchases were in Illinois. Later he removed to Missouri, attracted by the cheap prairie land that needed only a little drainage to make it yield abundantly. Today David Rankin owns nearly 26,000 acres of this same Missouri land, and it would all sell for $100 an acre. Add to this his cattle and horses and machinery and a few incidentals, such as bank stock and the like, and he has a fortune approximating $4,000,000. This has all been made in farming. Corn has been his specialty, and it has always been marketed in the form of cattle. He has always used the most modern machinery and the best equipment that money can buy. It has been the same with help. His foremen are men who can get results. He furnishes them with automobiles to take them from farm to farm because he has found that it pays in the time saved. He attributes his success to close personal attention and the application of business methods to farming.

Another man who has made millions in farming is Colonel James M. Smith of Georgia. Colonel Smith started raising corn and cotton on a rundown quarter section in Oglethorpe county soon after the war. The first year he lost $700. Last year his net profits were $100,000. In the meantime his farm has increased to 23,000 acres. Colonel Smith was one of the first men to build cottonseed oil mills and make a profit from what formerly had been a waste product. His farm was twenty-five miles from the nearest railroad, but he solved the problem by building a railroad of his own. He has always been a personal friend of all his men, white and black alike. He has provided well equipped schools for both the negro and the white children of his employees. Unlike David Rankin, who never had even a common school education, Colonel Smith is a college graduate. He learned to handle men in the army, and he applied the same organization to his farm work with great results.

Colonel Smith's success has demonstrated what can be done on the farm land of the south. One of his 200 acre farms a year ago yielded 4,800 bushels of wheat and 200 bales of cotton. The wheat sold for $1 a bushel and the cotton for $50 a bale, making a total income from the farm of $14,800. After taking out the expenses there was a net profit of $51 an acre. This might well make even a Mississippi valley farmer envious.

The west has been heralded as the land of opportunity. In the early days, when land could be had almost for the asking and the cattle business was at its best, a young man of the name of Henry Miller started out to make a fortune in the ranch business. Today he is worth $20,000,000. He once announced that he hoped some day to own the whole state of California. In this he did not succeed, although his holdings in California amount to 600,000 acres. He also has large tracts of land in Nevada and Oregon.

The ranch business is on the decline in the west, and what was once one man's cattle ranch is now being cut up to make farms for the hundreds of thousands of land hungry settlers who are pouring into what is still "the land of opportunity." About twenty years ago an Iowa farmer sold a half section of land, paid his debts, and, with seven or eight thousand dollars in cash, a wife and four children, started for Arizona. He located in the Salt river valley, bought as much of the cheap land as his money would pay for and set out to learn irrigation farming. He learned it well and made money. The surplus went to buy more land. He joined the Water Users' association and was influential in getting congress to start the Salt river irrigation project. Government irrigation insured permanent prosperity for the Salt river valley, and today this pioneer farmer who set out to make a fortune in "the great American desert" is worth more than $200,000.

Success in the irrigated districts is not necessarily measured in extensive farms and large bank accounts. A few years ago a locomotive engineer, sixty years old and broken in health, moved from Minneapolis to the state of Washington. He bought an acre of irrigated land, paying $1,400 for it. It contained an apple orchard in poor condition, a house and a few dilapidated outbuildings. The purchase of the land took nearly all the old engineer's savings. He pruned the old apple trees and set out thirty new ones. He sold off a few mongrel chickens that were on the place and bought a pure bred rooster and three hens. After the first year's expenses were paid he had enough money left to put on many improvements. The next year he put money in the bank, and the year after. So well did the acre produce that at the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland in 1905 it was awarded the prize for the second most productive and best managed farm in the west.

It is instances like this that really show the possibilities of the farm for the average man. Few men can become great cattle kings, and not many can repeat the success of David Rankin or Colonel Smith. But the success of the old engineer on his one acre of irrigated farm land ought not to be so hard to duplicate.

There are men who say land is so high that there is little chance for the man with small capital to get a start. Notwithstanding this more young men are buying farms every year. A dozen years or so ago a young German who had been working by the day in northern Iowa decided to get married. After the ceremony his chief possessions, in addition to a capable wife, were a horse and buggy and $150 in cash. He rented a farm and bought a grade Percheron mare. The prices he received for his first few colts opened his eyes to the profits of the horse business. He bought some more mares, pure breds this time. He made money from the start and has nearly enough money laid by to buy and pay for the farm he has been working.

Another young farmer in northern Iowa went into the dairy business six or seven years ago. Dairying was rather a new thing in his part of the country then. Most farmers preferred to raise corn, where they could do most of the work by machinery. Much of the land at that time was badly in need of drainage and was better suited to pasture than to corn growing. A few wet seasons reduced the profits of the corn growers almost to the vanishing point. The young fellow who had put his faith in dairy cows jingled milk pails and put money in the bank. After a few years of milking he bought the farm he was working and paid half cash. The mortgage cannot last long in the face of a prospering dairy business.

The average farmer of the middle west doesn't like to think of farming anything less than a quarter section. An eighty or a forty he considers rather "small business." Nevertheless there are many advantages in the smaller farms. The hired help problem is solved, for the owner can do all the work himself. It is much easier for a man with limited capital to buy a small farm, and the cost of stocking and equipping is less.

C. E. Beadle of Nebraska is one of the corn belt farmers who is making a living on forty acres of land. His average net income is $800 a year. He has a very comfortable house. To rent such a house in the city and live as well there as he and his family do on the farm would cost him $1,500 a year. Considered in that light, his little farm is really paying him a salary of $2,300 a year.

In the east the greatest opportunities are in truck farming. Only a few acres are required, and the returns are large. A certain truck farmer in the vicinity of Boston is making a small fortune on ten acres of ground. He has intensive cultivation down to a science. No sooner is one plant taken from the soil than another is ready to take its place. He has part of his truck farm under glass, so that he can grow crops in winter as well as in summer. Last year his net profits were $1,000 per acre.

REFORMERS REFUSE TO SUPPORT BERRY

[Special Correspondence.]

Philadelphia, Aug. 30.

The most significant and important development of the state campaign thus far is found in the refusal of prominent and potential men in the William Penn Party in this city to support the Berry-Casey Democratic combination on the Keystone Party ticket.

The fact that thousands of voters who have been allied with reform movements intend to support the full Republican state ticket, including the nominees for congress, has necessitated the withdrawal of the William Penn Party from the field, and the men who are behind the Berry candidacy are now seeking to marshal their Falstaffian outfit under the banner of the hybrid Keystone Party.

At a meeting of the city committee of the William Penn Party a few nights ago, when that organization went out of business for this campaign, members of the committee very frankly admitted that a large percentage of the citizens who have been voting the Penn ticket are Republicans in national and state affairs, while voting independently in municipal contests. It was acknowledged that they intend to support John K. Tener and all of his colleagues on the Republican state ticket, and leading reformers of the type of Theodore Justice, John C. Winston and others who have been among the heaviest contributors to local independent movements are out in public declarations of their purpose to stand by the Republican state nominees.

Cannot Stand a Bryanite.

Not only will Mr. Tener and his associates receive the support of this element, but they will also have the votes of thousands of Philadelphia independents who might under certain conditions back an independent Republican for governor, but who under no circumstances would support a radical Bryanite Democrat like Berry.

The loss of these two elements of the reform forces has completely demoralized the soldiers of fortune who are behind the Berry movement, following the attacks of Democratic politicians upon whom they confidently counted to stand by Berry.

The aggressive campaign waged for Senator Grim, the Democratic nominee for governor, has resulted in a lining up of the Democratic leaders in the regular Democratic organization. Democratic leaders who were expected to be for Berry have come out for Grim, in order to retain their standing with the Democracy. Where they have failed to do so they have been asked to resign or been expelled from Democratic committees.

Eugene C. Bonniwell, Berry's campaign manager, threatened with expulsion, has resigned from the chairmanship of the Delaware county Democratic committee.

While the Berry Democrats and the Grim Democrats are fighting among themselves reports from all over the state indicate harmony among the Republicans. Chairman Henry F. Walton and Secretary W. Harry Baker, of the Republican state committee, have the preliminary work up to date and have their plans matured for an aggressive campaign.

Gubernatorial Candidate Tener and his colleagues, Messrs. Reynolds, Wright and Houck, will address a meeting at Charleroi on Saturday, Sept. 3, when Mr. Tener's neighbors propose to make a great demonstration in his honor.

They will be in Pittsburg on Labor Day, Sept. 5; in Philadelphia, Sept. 7, at the State League of Republican clubs, Pottsville, Sept. 15, and in Lehigh county on Sept. 17.

Cookery Points

At a stag dinner given by a young woman for her husband and brother the decorations were so original as to be worth repeating here. In the center of the round table was placed a large cut glass tobacco jar filled with loose tobacco. On top of this was a little bisque doll dressed like a ballet dancer, with spreading skirts.

A circle of small playing cards was arranged to form a centerpiece, and from this radiated a row of cards to each plate, forming a wheel.

Corncob pipes were stacked at each corner of the table, and at each cover were tiny beer steins and little sample bottles of wine as souvenirs. The menu was a substantial one, such as men like. It consisted of bouillon, thick sirloin steak with French fried potatoes, string beans, endive salad with Camembert cheese and wafers, a frozen pudding and black coffee.

This is an easy dinner to prepare and serve even without a maid.

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION SUBMITTED TO THE CITIZENS OF THIS COMMONWEALTH FOR THEIR APPROVAL OR REJECTION, BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA, AND PUBLISHED BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF THE COMMONWEALTH, IN PURSUANCE OF ARTICLE XVIII OF THE CONSTITUTION.

Number One.

A CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to section twenty-six of article five of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Resolved (if the Senate concur), That the following amendment to section twenty-six of article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section 26 of Article V., which reads as follows: "Section 26. All laws relating to courts shall be general and of uniform operation, and the organization, jurisdiction, and powers of all courts of the same class or grade, so far as regulated by law, and the force and effect of the process and judgments of such courts, shall be uniform; and the General Assembly is hereby prohibited from creating other courts to exercise the powers vested by this Constitution in the judges of the Courts of Common Pleas and Orphans' Courts," be amended so that the same shall read as follows:—

Section 26. All laws relating to courts shall be general and of uniform operation, and the organization, jurisdiction, and powers of all courts of the same class or grade, so far as regulated by law, and the force and effect of the process and judgments of such courts, shall be uniform; but, notwithstanding any provisions of this Constitution, the General Assembly shall have full power to establish new courts, from time to time, as the same may be needed in any city or county, and to prescribe the powers and jurisdiction thereof, and to increase the number of judges in any courts now existing or hereafter created, or to reorganize the same, or to vest in other courts the jurisdiction heretofore exercised by courts not of record, and to abolish the same wherever it may be deemed necessary for the orderly and efficient administration of justice.

Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Number Two.

RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, so as to eliminate the requirement of payment of taxes as a qualification of the right to vote.

Resolved (if the House of Representatives concur), That the following amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:

That section one of article eight be amended, by striking out the fourth numbered paragraph thereof, so that the said section shall read as follows:

Section 1. Every male citizen twenty-one years of age, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all elections, subject however to such laws requiring and regulating the registration of electors as the General Assembly may enact.

First. He shall have been a citizen of the United States at least one month.

Second. He shall have resided in the State one year (or if, having previously been a qualified elector or native-born citizen of the State, he shall have removed therefrom and returned, then six months), immediately preceding the election.

Third. He shall have resided in the election district where he shall offer to vote at least two months immediately preceding the election.

ROBERT McAFEE,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Number Three.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, so as to consolidate the courts of common pleas of Allegheny County.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following amendment to the Constitution of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section six of article five be amended, by striking out the said section, and inserting in place thereof the following:

Section 6. In the county of Philadelphia all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the district courts and courts of common pleas, subject to such changes as may be made by this Constitution or by law, shall be in Philadelphia vested in five distinct and separate courts of equal and co-ordinate jurisdiction, composed of three judges each. The said courts in Philadelphia shall be designated respectively as the court of common pleas number one, number two, number three, number four, and number five, but the number of said courts may be by law increased, from time to time, and shall be in like manner designated by successive numbers. The number of judges in any of said courts, or in any county where the establishment of additional court may be authorized by law, may be increased, from time to time, and whenever such increase shall amount in the whole to three, such three judges shall compose a distinct and separate court as aforesaid, which shall be numbered as aforesaid. In Philadelphia all suits shall be instituted in the said courts of common pleas without designating the number of the said court, and the several courts shall distribute and apportion the business among them in such manner as shall be provided by rules of court, and each court, to which any suit shall be thus assigned, shall have exclusive jurisdiction thereof, subject to change of venue, as shall be provided by law.

In the county of Allegheny all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the several district courts of common pleas shall be vested in one court of common pleas, composed of all the judges in commission in said courts. Such jurisdiction and powers shall extend to all proceedings at law and in equity which shall have been instituted in the several numbered courts and shall be subject to such changes and subject to change of venue as provided by law. The president judge of said court shall be selected as provided by law. The number of judges in said court may be by law increased from time to time. This amendment shall take effect on the first day of January succeeding its adoption.

ROBERT McAFEE,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Number Four.

JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the eighth article thereof:—

That Article Nine, Section Eight, be amended to read as follows:

Amend section eight, article nine, Constitution of Pennsylvania, which shall hereafter read as follows:—

"Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation," so as to read as follows:—

Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation, except that any debt or debts hereinafter incurred by the city and county of Philadelphia for the construction and development of subways for transit purposes, or for the construction of wharves and docks, or the reclamation of land to be used in the construction of a system of wharves and docks, as public improvements, owned or to be owned by said city and county of Philadelphia, and which shall yield to the city and county of Philadelphia current net revenue in excess of the interest on said debt or debts and of the annual installments necessary for the sinking fund for the extinguishment of said debt or debts, may be excluded in ascertaining the power of the city and county of Philadelphia to become otherwise indebted: Provided, That a sinking fund for their cancellation shall be established and maintained.

Animal Food Supply Short.

The shortage of the animal food supply in this country is shown by the recent report of the Department of Commerce and Labor. This is revealed in the live stock and meat movements for the first half of the present year. The distribution of this loss in hog receipts is far from uniform. Chicago shows a loss of 31 per cent, as compared with the above average; Kansas City, a loss of 26 per cent; Omaha, a loss of 20 per cent, and St. Louis a loss of only 5 per cent. The curtailment in the commercial supply of cattle is less pronounced, the six months receipts for the present year being about 6 per cent below the average half-yearly receipts for the preceding five-year period. It should be stated, however, that the cattle figures for Omaha and St. Louis include the receipts of calves. In as much as the six months receipts of calves for the present year at the five markets which report them separately were over 22 per cent larger than the average six months' receipts for the preceding five-year period, it follows that the receipts of cattle at the seven leading markets were really lower than stated above, and the losses, as compared with earlier years, correspondingly larger.—York Dispatch.

Lemon Juice for Freckles.

On summer dressing tables lemons should always be placed, for this fruit is an excellent bleach, and light freckles, a thin coat of tan and stains of various kinds that assail the skin disappear with its use, says the Philadelphia "Times."

Be it understood, however, that the acid is not strong enough to remove deep color, and that only by applying it constantly will it be efficacious. Also, like every other such whitener, it has disadvantages and constant application of it often drying.

For this reason its effect must be watched, and if there comes an appearance of chapping, use of the acid must be omitted for a few days.

This is less likely to occur in warm than in cold weather.

One merit of lemon juice as a cosmetic is its cleaning properties, so that it may be brought into requisition both before and after washing.

For instance, when there are stains on the fingers they should be dug into the fruit and turned around, when usually vigorous scrubbing with a wet nail brush will remove all traces of discoloration.

For the face, unless sunburned or freckled, it is an excellent plan to wipe over the complexion with the juice, then wash and again put it on, letting this last moisture dry into the skin.

When bleaching is the object, as for sunburn and tan, a final rub with the fruit is essential, letting the last application dry in.

William M. Chase's Top Hat.

"William M. Chase was a picturesque figure, dressing in clothes that had a certain artistic originality, though they conformed more or less to the prevailing fashions," says the Woman's Home Companion. "He invariably wore a high hat with an unusually flat brim, then a novelty in this city, though popular in artistic circles in Paris. Such a hat he has worn ever since, though he is not much alone in this fashion as in the old day.

"They tell a story of this famous hat. On one occasion, Chase, on his way home, stepped into a little wine-shop and ordered a jug of claret of a special brand sent to his house. The lad who brought it came to the front door, an hour afterward, when the artist had already arrived. 'Some wine,' he said curtly. The maid, knowing there was yet plenty in the cellar and opining the lad had made a mistake, said she was sure it was not for that house and did the boy remember the name of the man who ordered it. The boy did'nt. 'Then,' said the servant, 'you've come to the wrong place; we never ordered wine.' At this moment the boy spied the famous hat on the hall table. 'Say,' he asked, 'does that hat live here?' 'Yes,' said the amused maid. 'Then,' said the boy triumphantly, 'here's where the wine belongs.'"

CHAPTER VII.

AFFAIRS OF STATE.

THE grand duke stamped back and forth with a rumble as of distant thunder. They would play with him, eh? Well, they had loosed the lion this time. He had sent his valet to summon her highness and Herbeck.

"And tell them to put everything else aside."

He kneaded the note in his hand powerfully. It was anonymous, but it spoke clearly, like truth. The sender remained undiscoverable.

Had he not opposed it for months? And now, having surrendered against his better judgment, this gratuitous affront was offered him. It was damnable. He smote the offending note. War! Nothing less. He was prepared for it. Twenty thousand troops were now in the valley, and there were 20,000 reserves.

Herbeck came calmly in.

"Why the devil couldn't you have left well enough alone? Read this!" The duke flung the note down on his desk.

Herbeck picked it up and worked out the creases.

"Well?" The query tingled with rage.

The answer on the chancellor's lips was not uttered. Hildegarde came in. He embraced her and kissed her brow.

"Read," said the duke to her.

She slipped from her father's arms and looked with pity at the chancellor.

"What do you think of this, Hildegarde?"

"Why, father, I think it is the very best thing in the world," dryly.

"An insult like this?" The duke grew rigid. "You accept it calmly in this fashion?"

"Shall I weep and tear my hair over a boy I have never seen? No, thank you. I was about to make known to you this very evening that I had reconsidered the offer. I shall never marry his majesty."

Herbeck explained the situation.

"Your highness, the regent is really not to blame, for his majesty had given him free rein in the matter, and his royal highness, working as I have been for the best interests of the two [illegible] dreamed that the king would rebel. The king has been generous enough to leave the publicity in our hands—that is to say, he agrees to accept the humiliation of being rejected by her serene highness."

"That is very generous of him!" said the duke sarcastically. "Send for Ducwitz."

"Ducwitz, your highness?" cried the chancellor, chilled.

"Immediately!"

"Your highness, if you call Ducwitz I shall surrender my portfolio." The chancellor was firm.

"Do so. There are others to take up your work."

Hildegarde flew to the duke's side and snatched at his sleeve.

"Father, you are mad!"

"At least I am master in Ehrenstein. Herbeck, you will have the kindness to summon General Ducwitz."

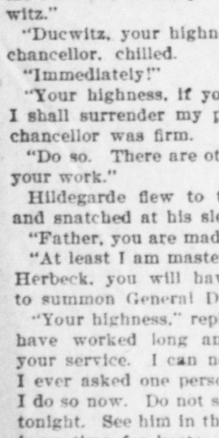
"Your highness," replied Herbeck, "I have worked long and faithfully in your service. I can not recollect that I ever asked one personal favor. But I do so now. Do not send for Ducwitz tonight. See him in the morning. This is no time for haste. You will throw the army into Jugendheit, and there will follow a bloody war."

"I will have my revenge!" stubbornly.

"Father, listen to me. I am the affronted person. I—I alone—have the right to say what shall be done in the matter. And I say to you if you do these cruel things, dismiss his excellency and bring war and death to Ehrenstein, I will never forgive you—never, never! You are wrong, wrong, and I, your daughter, tell you so frankly. Leave it to me. There will be neither war nor humiliation."

"My dear child," he said, "I have suffered too much at the hands of Jugendheit. It was my daughter the first time; it is my honor now," proudly.

"Will it balance war and devastation?" the girl asked quietly. "Is it not pride rather than honor? The prince regent made a pardonable blunder. Do not you, my father, make an unpardonable one?"



"WILL IT BALANCE WAR AND DEVASTATION?"

"A Portia to the judgment!" said the chancellor, his eye kindling. "Let it all rest upon my shoulders. I alone am to blame. It was I who first suggested the alliance."

Notwithstanding that he was generally hasty, the duke was a just man. He offered his hand, with half a smile.

"You are bidding me farewell, your highness?" said Herbeck.

"No, count. I would not let you go for half my duchy. Even a duke may be a fool sometimes."

Herbeck laid his cold hand upon the duke's. Then he went over to her highness and kissed her hand gratefully, for it was truly at her feet the wreath of victory lay.

"Highness," he said softly, "you shall marry when you will."

"And where?"

"I would that I could make it so. But there is a penalty for being placed so high. We cannot change this unwritten law."

"Heaven did not write it," she replied.

"No, my daughter," said the duke. "Man is at the bottom of all the kinks and twists in this short life, not heaven. But Herbeck is right. You shall marry when you will."

The knock of the valet was again heard.

"Your highness, there is a young woman outside, a peasant, who desires to speak to her serene highness."

"What! She enters the palace without any more trouble than this?"

"By my orders, father," said Hildegarde, who gathered that this privileged visitor must be Gretchen of the Krumerweg. "Admit her."

Gretchen was ushered in. Her throat was a little full as she recognized the three most important persons in the grand duchy.

"The little goose girl!" the duke said half audibly.

"Yes, highness." Gretchen's face was serious, and her eyes were mournful. She carried an envelope in her hand tightly.

"Come to me, Gretchen," said the princess. "What is it?"

"She is dead, highness, and I found this letter under her pillow."

Herbeck took the envelope.

"Dead?" Hildegarde's eyes filled.

"Who is dead?" demanded the duke.

"Emma Schultz, father. Oh, I know you will forgive me for this deception. She has been in Dreiberg for a month dying, and I have often stolen out to see her." She let her tears fall unrestrained.

The duke stared at the rug. Presently he said: "Let her be buried in consecrated ground. Wrong or right, that chapter is closed, my child. What is in the letter, Herbeck?"

Herbeck was a strong man. He was always far removed from tears, but there was a mist over the usual clarity of his vision. He ripped down the flap. It was only a simple note to her serene highness begging her to give the inclosed banknotes to one Gretchen, who lived in the Krumerweg. The notes represented a thousand crowns.

"Take them, little goose girl," said the duke. "Your ship has come in. This will be your dowry."

An icy shiver ran up and down Gretchen's spine, a shiver of wonder, delight, terror. A thousand crowns! A fortune!

"And I shall add to it another thousand," said Hildegarde. "Give them to me, father."

In all this fortune amounted to little more than $400, but to Gretchen, frugal and thrifty, to whom a single crown was a large sum, to her it represented wealth. She was now the richest girl in the lower town. Dreams of kaleidoscopic variety flew through her head. Tears sprang into her eyes. She had the power to do no more than weep.

The duke was the first to relieve the awkwardness of the moment.

"Count, has it not occurred to you that we stand in the presence of two very beautiful young women?"

Herbeck scrutinized Gretchen with care. Then he compared her with the princess. The duke was right. And the thing which struck him with most force was that, while each possessed a beauty individual to herself, it was not opposite, but strangely alike.

When the duke was alone he slowly passed on to his secretary and opened a drawer. He laid a small bundle on the desk and untied the string. One by one he ranged the articles—two little yellow shoes, a little cloak trimmed with ermine. There had been a locket, but that was now worn by her highness.

* * * * * * *

Hermann Breunner lived in the granite lodge just within the eastern gates of the royal gardens. He was a widower and shared the ample lodge with the undergardeners and their families. He was a man of brooding moods, and there was no laughter in his withered heart. He adjusted his heavy spectacles and held the note slantingly toward the candle. A note or a letter was a singular event in Hermann's life. This note, left by the porter of the Grand hotel, moved him with surprise. It requested that he present himself at 8 o'clock at the office of the hotel and ask to be directed to the room of Hans Grumbach, whoever he might be.

He decided to go. Certainly this man Grumbach did not urge him without some definite purpose. The concierge at the hotel, who knew Hermann, conducted him to room 10 on the entresole. Hermann knocked. A voice bade him enter.

"You wished to see me?"

"Yes," offering a chair.

"You are Hermann Breunner," began Grumbach, "and you once had a brother named Hans."

Hermann grew rigid in his chair. "I have no brother."

"You did have."

Hermann's head dropped. "My God, yes, I did have a brother, but he was a scoundrel."

"Perhaps he was a scoundrel. He is—dead!" softly.

"God's will be done!" But Hermann's face turned lighter.

"As a boy he loved you."

"And did I not love him?" said Hermann fiercely. "Did I not worship that boy, who was more like a son to me than a brother?"

"I knew your brother. I knew him well. He was not a scoundrel, only weak. He went to America and became successful in business. He fought with the north in the war. He was not a coward. He did his fighting bravely and honorably. He died facing the enemy, and his last words were of you. He begged your forgiveness. He implored that you forget that black moment. He was young, he said, and they offered him a thousand crowns. In a moment of despair he fell."

"Despair! Did he confess?"

"Yes."

"Did he tell you to whom he sold his honor?"

"That he never knew. A gypsy from the hills came to him, so he said."

"From Jugendheit?"

"I say that he knew nothing. He believed that the gypsy wanted her highness to hold for ransom. Hans spoke of a girl called Tekla."

"Tekla? Ah, yes; Hans was in love with that doll face."

"Hans followed the band of gypsies into the mountains. The real horror of his act did not come home to him till then. Ah, the remorse! But it was too late. They dressed the little one in rags. But when I ran away from them I took her little shoes and cloak and locket."

Hermann was on his feet. Grumbach's eyes were as bright and glowing as coals.

Hermann leaned forward.

"Is it you, Hans, and I did not know you?"

"It is I, brother."

"My God!" Hermann sank down weakly.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE SOCIALISTS.

THE ceiling spun and the gaslight separated itself into a hundred flames before the gaze of the amazed Hermann. "You said he was dead!" he gasped to Grumbach.

"So I am to the world, to you and to all who knew me," quietly.

"Why have you returned? The duke will hang you."

"Perhaps I am a fool, perhaps I am willing to pay the penalty of my crime. At least that was uppermost. I have learned that her highness has been found, and the rope is not made that will fit my neck. Will you denounce me, brother?"

"I?"

"Why not? Five thousand crowns still hang over me."

"Blood money for me? No, Hans!"

"Besides, I have made a will. At my death you will be rich."

"Rich?"

"Yes, Hermann. I am worth 200,000 crowns."

Hermann breathed with effort.

"But riches are not everything."

"Sometimes they are little enough," Hans agreed.

"Oh, why did you do it?"

"Have I not told you, Hermann? There is nothing more to be added." Then, with rising passion: "Nothing more now that my heart is blistered and scarred with regret and remorse. God knows that I have repented and repented. I went to war because I wanted to be killed. They shot me here and here and here, and this saber cut would have split the skull of any other man. But it was willed that I should come back here."

"My poor brother! You must fly. The chancellor is suspicious."

"I know that. But since you, my brother, failed to identify me certainly his excellency will not. And you will not betray me when I tell you that I have returned principally to find out whence came those thousand crowns."

"Ah! Find that out, Hans; yes, yes!" Hermann began to look more like himself. "But what was your part?"

"Mine? I was to tell where her highness and her nurse were to be at a certain hour of the day, nothing more. My running away was the expression of my guilt; otherwise they would never have connected me with the abduction."

Hans rose.

"Hans, have you no other greeting?" Hermann asked, spreading out his arms.

The wanderer's face beamed, and the brothers embraced.

"You forgive me, then, Hermann?"

"Must I not, little Hans? You are all that is left me of the blood. True, I swore that if ever I saw you again I should curse you."

"And what has become of the principal cause—Tekla?"

"Bah! She is fat and homely and the mother of seven squalling children."

"What a world! To think that Tekla should be at the bottom of all this tangle!"

A rap on the door startled them. Hans slowly opened the door. Carmichael stood outside.

"Ah, captain!" Hans shook Carmichael by the hand and drew him into the room.

Hermann passed into the hall and softly closed the door after him. It was better that the American should not see the emotion which still illumined [illegible].

"What's the good word, captain?" inquired Hans.

Carmichael put in a counter query. "What was your brother doing here?"

"I have told him who I am."

"Was it wise?"

"Hermann sleeps soundly. He will talk neither in his sleep nor in his waking hours. He has forgiven me."

"For what?" thoughtlessly.

"The time for explanations has not yet come, captain."

"Pardon me, Grumbach. But I came to bring you the invitation to the military ball."

The broad white envelope emblazoned with the royal arms fascinated Hans, not by its resplendency, but by the possibilities which it afforded.

"Thank you. It was very good of you."

"It was a pleasure, comrade. What do you say to an hour or two at the Black Eagle? We'll drown our sorrows together."

The Black Eagle was lively, as usual, and there were some familiar faces. The vintner was there, and so was Gretchen. Carmichael hailed her.

Mrs. Harrison on New York Society.

"My earliest impressions of the city of my adoption, New York, when I came there as a young bride some years after the war," says Mrs. Burton Harrison in the Woman's Home Companion, "was that in many respects it possessed attractions likely to be lost in the rush of improvements which were to make of it the present great metropolis. This has proved to be so, and I make haste to add that I am far from including in them certain physical aspects of the town, the paving of its streets, the long rows of dreary brownstone houses, the telegraph-poles, omnibuses and horse-cars now happily swept away.

"My point of view was chiefly focussed upon the social relations of the people among whom I had come to make my new home, away from the warm and cordial Southern country where everybody knew everybody and there was no heart-burning about 'sets' since we recognized but one. As a matter of fact, I found pretty much the same condition of things existant in New York of the seventies. The leaders of society, Mrs. Belmont, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, the two Mrs. Astors, Mrs. Lewis M. Rutherford and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt (mother of the future President) were all 'high-born Hoels,' about whom there could be no contest, no dispute.

"Mrs. Belmont and Mrs. John Jacob Astor were spoken of as entertaining most often, and with more of foreign elegance than any others, because their large means, handsome establishments and love of hospitality carried their parties into more conspicuous place before the public eye. But it was certainly not the custom, as it is now, to strain for invitations to the houses of wealthier hostesses and to consider the less lavish entertainers in the second rank.

"All of the ladies I have named, some more, some less, had the habit of cordiality in receiving. Their 'at homes' were, consequently, cheerful gatherings where people liked to come and to linger. As I remember it, society was equally pleased to be bidden to one of the broad old-fashioned dignified homes of the dwellers on Second Avenue who made no attempt to vie with the few exceedingly rich in the newer quarters of the town."

Real Estate Transfers.

Recorder William Brown has recorded the following real estate transfers in the last week:

County Commissioners to George Walker, August 12, 1910, tract land in Taylor township; $1.

HAPPY WOMEN

Plenty of Them in Bellefonte and Good Reason for it.

Wouldn't any woman be happy,
After years of backache suffering,
Days of misery, nights of unrest,
The distress of urinary troubles,
She finds relief and cure?
No reason why any Bellefonte reader
Should suffer in the face of evidence like this.

Mrs. B. F. Deitrich, 391 E. Bishop St., Bellefonte, Pa., says: "I know that Doan's Kidney Pills are a good kidney medicine and I do not hesitate one moment in confirming the public statement I gave in their praise in Oct. 1907. A member of my family complained a great deal of backache and headaches and I had heard so much about Doan's Kidney Pills that I procured a supply at Green's Pharmacy Co. Their use effected a complete cure and also strengthened the kindeys. The benefit received has been lasting and I have thus been convinced that Doan's Kidney Pills act just as represented."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Millburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The Crops.

Aside from the fear that cooler weather toward the close of the week would injure corn, the general crop report this week was of continued improvement, except for cotton in Texas. Although temperatures fell on Thursday night to 38 degrees in Nebraska and Iowa, no frosts are reported, however. Corn, favored by very general rains, has made good progress and regained further lost ground. The southern corn crop is made and is a record-breaker; as will be that in the northern states if frost holds off. The Nebraska yield will be short of last year, and drought has hurt the Ohio crop. Recent rains have improved pasturage throughout the west, and hay and potato crop reports are better.

Oats are unquestionably a record crop. The price is down to 25 and 30 cents in the west, and the selling movement is slackening.

Wheat harvesting reports are satisfactory, and threshing returns are better than expected in the southern half of the spring-wheat belt. The threshing returns in northern Minnesota and North Dakota are, however, not any better. Trade estimates of the spring-wheat yield have been raised above 200,000,000 bushels.

A very large fruit crop will be gathered in the Pacific northwest.

Reports to Bradstreet's from Maine point to a large good quality hay crop and an average potato crop, but sweet corn is maturing slowly.

Except in Texas, where dry weather has damaged the crop in the sandy lands, the reports from the cotton crop this week are more optimistic. In the black lands of Texas the crop is still in good shape, though rain is needed. Wace reports heavy damage and a crop in that territory little better than last year. A yield of 3,000,000 bales for the state is predicted from Dallas. Complaints from the eastern half of the belt are less numerous. In the lower Mississippi valley improvement is general.

Louisianna rice and sugar promise well, but in Texas rice is short.

Torturing eczema spreads its burning area every day. Doan's Ointment quickly stops its spreading, instantly relieves the itching, cures it permanently. At any drug store.

Bumblebees and Copperhead.

Stumbling upon a bumble bee nest about which was coiled a four-foot copperhead snake, Fred Shearer, of Stilitz, York county, had his hands full for a few minutes, but came off victorious. The reptile and the bees had evidently been engaged in a pitched battle growing out of the snake's fondness for honey, but both sides suspended operations and made a joint attack upon Shearer. The youth retreated to the house for a tourch and a club and armed with these beat the snake to death and smoked out the bees. A few stings were his only injuries.

An automobile driven by Remembrandt Peale, a son of the late Senator S. R. Peale, of Lock Haven, ran down and killed Clifford Simmers, aged 14 years, at St. Benedict, Cambria County. Mr. Peale was so deeply grieved by the accident that he vowed he would never again ride in an automobile.

Looking to be strong and well and anything but a corpse, J. W. Grubb, of McKeesport, formerly of Bellefonte, dropped into town on Saturady and called at "The Republican" office to advance his subscription another year. His hearty laugh as he commented on his physical condition would cure any man who had even an aggravated attack of the "blues." Four or five years ago Mr. Grubb was in poor health and some of the physicians said that his case was hopeless. He wasn't entirely satisfied with this, and especially with the thought of handing in his checks on such short notice. He said that one of his reasons for coming back to Bellefonte was to prove that he was still alive and in better health than at any time in five years. The weakness in his chest, he explained, has been entirely cured and he fully expects that in a very short time he will be entirely well. Here's hoping so.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Harper were Tyrone visitors on Saturday.

Here is a word of thanks to Edward Ishler, who yesterday very kindly enclosed two nice one dollar bills to adjust his subscription and make sure that he will receive "The Republican" during the coming year.

Miss Pearl Royer spent Sunday as the guest of Miss Sabra Faxon, at Rebersburg. Miss Faxon holds a clerical position in Panama, and is spending her vacation at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Faxon.

Misses Louise McClellan and Mable Trafford, D. Paul Fortney, W. C. Heinle, Clement Dale, Edward L. Gates and J. Homer Decker were among those from Bellefonte to attend the Williams reunion, at Martha, on Saturday.

Our good friend, George Waite, the man who never misses a day at the Bellefonte Fuel and Supply Company, handed us a one dollar bill on Saturday night, with instructions to advance his subscription to "The Republican" another year. Thank you, George.

Charles Bolig, Richard Keimer and Herman Bolig, all of Philadelphia, are in town, completing a contract at the Court House for the Chapman Decorative Company. William McShea and Edward Gayton, representing Lloyd, Garrett & Company, also of Philadelphia, are finishing up a contract for that firm.

Joseph L. Runkle, the plumber, is installing a new system of plumbing in the second floor of the Centre Hall Hotel, covering a new equipment of bathrooms, with hot and cold water, toilets and lavatories. When completed Proprietor James W. Runkle says he will have one of the best and most complete country hotels in the State.

Miss Frances Womelsdorft, of Philipsburg, gave her friends in that place a surprise by slipping away to Wheeling, West Virginia, where she was married, on August 13, to John J. Netrick, of Wilkinsburg. It was only a few days ago that the news leaked out. Now the happy young couple are at the home of the bride's parents where they are receiving congratulations and best wishes for a long and blissful married life.

Mr. and Mrs. John I. Olewine and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Hoke of Hanover, autoed to Lock Haven on Tuesday.

Monday will be "Labor Day", indeed, for the school children, the bell that morning summoning them to their books for the winter.

Martin Reese, the Snow Shoe train conductor who is always on the job, was a pleasant caller yesterday, stopping long enough to say a good word about our mutual friend, Davy Chambers, and also to advance his subscription to "The Republican" another year.

The J. H. Turnbach Hardward Company, one of Philipsburg's leading institutions, is to be succeeded by a new firm, to be known as the Philipsburg Hardware Company. The chief owners will be G. W. Bratton, of Patton; P. H. Gross, of Johnstown, and Claude Gette, of Philipsburg; who have applied for a charter.

While enroute from State College to Harrisburg, Dr. William Frear, dropped into "The Republican" office yesterday and advanced his subscription another year. We not only appreciated the one dollar bill which he very kindly left behind but greatly enjoyed a little chat while he was waiting for the Tyrone train to pull into the station.

Speaking of that new Ford automobile which Irvin Dreese, of Lemont, purchased last week, we would like to know whether there is any particular magnetism in that brand of car to attract a mule's heels. It is reported, via wireless, that during one of Irv's first trips out with his new car he drove plumb into a team of mules, the machine becoming contrary at the wrong time and refusing to stop. The mules, however, took the incident good naturedly and refused to be offended.

WEDDED AT SNOW SHOE

Miss Eva McGowan Today Becomes Bride of James F. Kelley.

A pretty wedding was that at 7 o'clock today (Thursday) at St. Mary's Catholic church, at Snow Shoe, the contracting parties being Miss Eva McGowan, of Moshannon, and James F. Kelley, of Snow Shoe. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Farran, of Altoona. The groom was attended by Paul McGowan, a brother of the bride, while Miss May Kelley, the groom's sister, was bridesmaid.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was tendered the happy young couple, who then departed on a wedding trip to Philadelphia and Atlantic City. On their return they will reside in Snow Shoe. The groom is a son of M. D. Kelley and is popular with a large circle of friends. The bride is a daughter of John McGowan and is a most estimable young lady.
